Together now we stand
To pledge our love with heart and hand
To our beloved Douglas Freeman High.

These opening lines from our Alma Mater, written by Mary Beth Baldwin in 1956, establish the mood for the 1958 HISTORIAN.

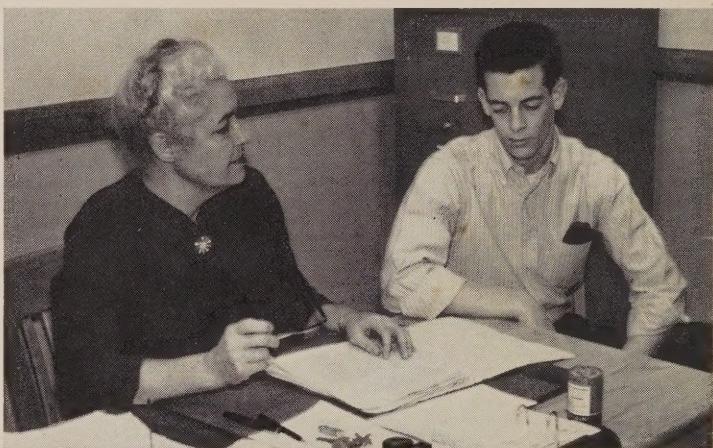

From them emerges the student body of Douglas Freeman High School, drawn together in many ways . . . by the heightened emotion of a football game, cheering the team to victory . . . in an SCA assembly by an intense interest in an amendment to our constitution . . . or in excited anticipation of an unexpected afternoon off when the sight of falling snow brightens the gloom of a winter day.

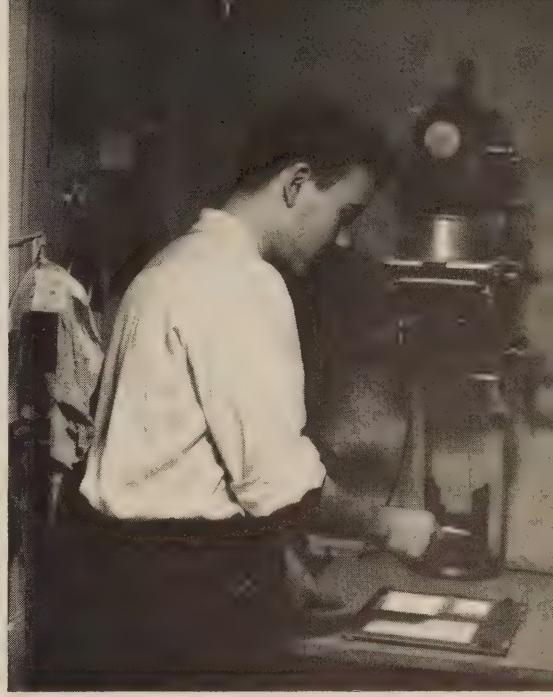

Within this body of youth lies the spirit of the school, its success and its worth. From this spirit the words of our song and the pages of our yearbook draw their life and their meaning.

The Simple Truths We Learn
Like Beacons Bright
Through Storms Will Burn...

Our swiftly moving years at Douglas Freeman have been vibrant with life and activity . . . the days and nights filled with work in the classrooms . . . the library . . . on the athletic fields . . . and at home. We have studied and planned and played—probably without stopping to look at ourselves and at the ideals and values that were becoming our own. But they are there . . . A strong sense of honor and responsibility has come through the influence of teachers and friends. We have learned to give and share ourselves, not just our material gifts to the less fortunate at Thanksgiving and Christmas, but an intangible giving as we stay late after school to work on a publication or a play or to practice with a team. We have come to know the feeling of satisfaction that remains when we work hard to do something well.

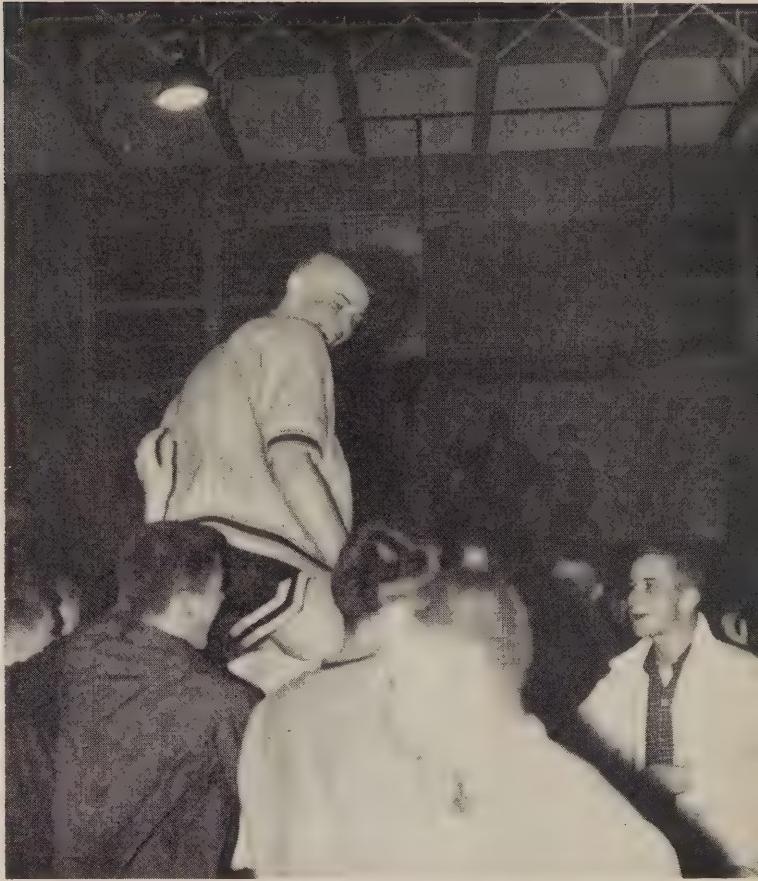

To Lighten Paths Which May
Through Darkness Lie...

The simple truths that have been our guides in high school will be even more important in the years ahead. We have learned to work independently . . . as well as to make ourselves part of a smoothly functioning team. We know the time and effort that must go into a polished performance at a band concert, in an act at Stunt Night, or on the basketball court.

Part of us now are a knowledge of the warm glow of friendship, the inspiration of beauty, the strength of faith in God, and a new found maturity built on respect and confidence in others . . . and ourselves.

When Years Slip by Like Days...

Our school days seem to follow a pattern . . . classes . . . meetings . . . after-school activities . . . math assignments . . . term papers . . . homework. The days pass one by one. We think of tomorrow . . . and more school. Suddenly we find those tomorrows are yesterdays . . . the seemingly never ending high school years have flown by . . . years built of moments like the time our fellow students made us king of the hour or that memorable day we slipped on our class rings and knew that here was a part of Douglas Freeman we'd always have.

And Present Turns To Past

Although we yearn for summer and its promise of a vacation from textbooks, exams, and classroom routine, we suddenly turn to find that days have flown by . . . the present has turned to past . . . and we are left with priceless moments described in the letters of friends in our yearbooks . . . or pictured on the finished film of a forgotten camera.

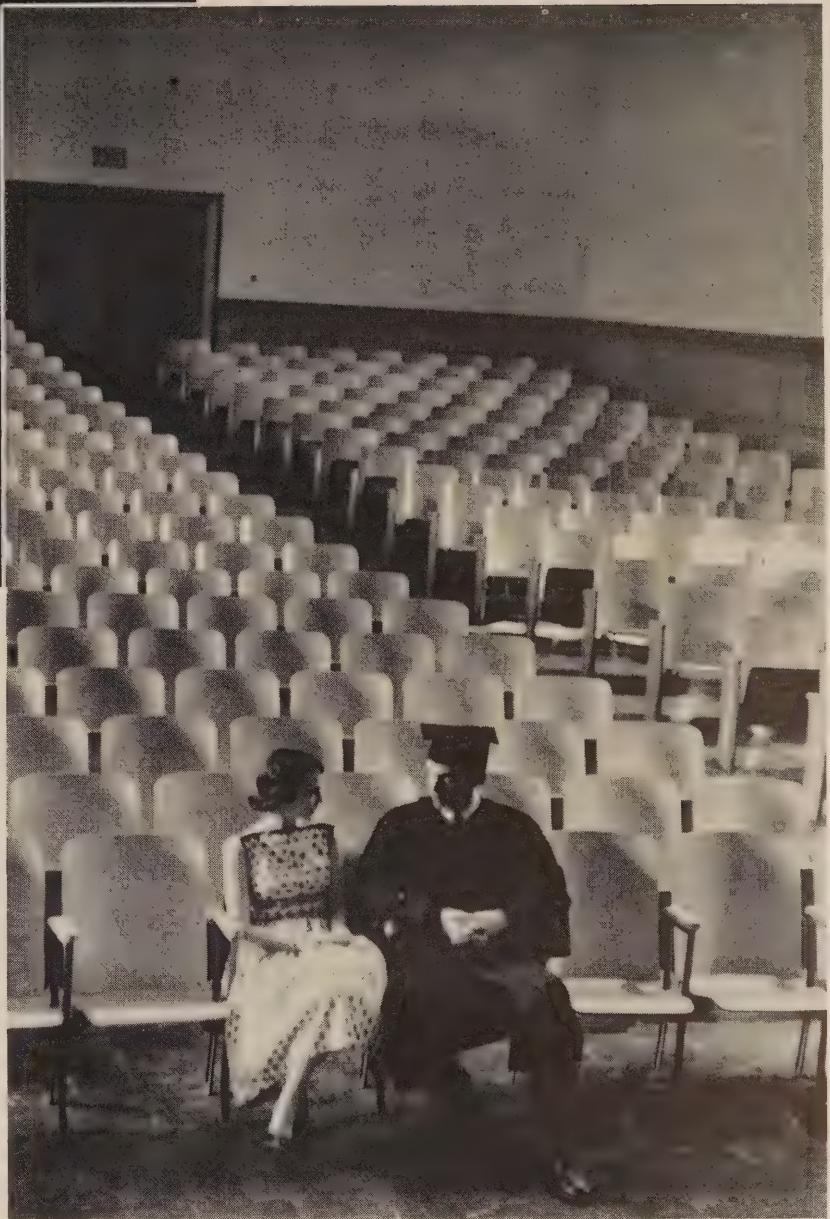

The Friendships Made Within These Halls
Through Coming Years Will Last.

With a natural desire for companionship and numerous daily opportunities for getting to know our fellow students, we formed friendships which played a vital role in our life at DSF . . . friendships created suddenly as we shared laughter over a newspaper anecdote . . . those formed as if by plan while we braved the trials of chemistry lab together . . . friendships evolved from hours of rehearsal for the senior play, strengthened by nights of study for June exams, sealed by the exchange of class rings . . . warm friendships, deep friendships, lasting bonds.

Though soon true friends must part
Fond mem'ries stamped on every heart
Confirm our love for Douglas Freeman High.

The day of graduation comes at last and perhaps for the first time we realize that we must now go our separate ways from many of those we've come to know best. With diplomas in our hands, we walk across the lawn for the last time, recalling the last few years . . . the surprise parties at lunch, dancing in the dreamland of the junior-senior prom, the moments when we seemed alone in a school so large, the smell of freshly cut grass in the spring, the deafening roar in the gym at a basketball game . . .

Suddenly we know that a rich experience has been ours . . . an experience in learning to understand others, absorbing knowledge, and finding ourselves . . . and we walk away with memories that will linger . . . though they fade . . . memories that will always whisper of Douglas Freeman.

ORGANIZATIONS

Through our organizations, we satisfy our need to participate . . .

we become more than just students . . .

more than just classmates . . .

we become spirited Rebels . . . and friends.

SCA welcomes exchange student

This fall every Rebel sat up and took notice . . . Jorg had arrived! Jorg Wasser was Douglas Freeman's exchange student from Munich, Germany.

Douglas Freeman students were able to participate in the American Field Service exchange program because of the school-wide fund raising project last spring, piloted by Johnny Thompson and Melvin Fratkin. Most of the money was pledged by school organizations and classes in an exciting rally in the gym.

Because the pledges involved almost everyone at Douglas Freeman, each student felt a keen interest in the tall, attractive blonde even before his arrival in early September.

Jorg first came to DSF's halls last spring. A snapshot appeared on the bulletin board, accompanied by a letter addressed to Douglas Freeman. The letter gave the school a preview of the exchange student's interests and hobbies, and through its typed words DSF began to be aware of the wonderful experience to be theirs when Jorg came to share a year of his life with them.

The first semester Jorg spent in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Smith, moving in February to live with the family of Mr. and Mrs. Mallory Freeman.

Jorg soon became active in school life. Students met him in classes, at games and dances, saw him in the Christmas play, worked with him in Hi-Y, Key Club, and other organizations, or just passed him in the halls. Through these relationships, he taught Freemanites much about his country, its people and customs, and more important, that their friendship with him was symbolic of the ties stretching across the Atlantic between his native and his adopted countries. Each student, as a member of the SCA, hoped that through Jorg's experiences and newly-acquired knowledge his country would learn more about the American people when he returned to Germany.

SCA OFFICERS. Miss Carolyn Baker, Steve Matthews, Bobby Freeman, Susan Ottley, John Page Rawlings, Miss Ada Land.

Jorg Wasser seems amused at the bewilderment of John Page Rawlings as he finds the motor of a small foreign car in the trunk.

After an exciting campaign, highlighted by speeches and slogans, pins and banners, the student body of Douglas Freeman marched to the polls in May of 1957. Every student who had paid the ten-cent poll tax was eligible to vote for the SCA officers. An "extra" published by the Commentator staff announced the following school leaders for the coming year: John Page Rawlings, president; Bobby Freeman, vice-president; Susan Ottley, secretary; and Steve Mathews, treasurer.

John Page and his cabinet took on new responsibilities as the symbol of office, the gavel, was handed him by the graduating president, Melvin Fratkin.

The student leaders plunged immediately into their work during the summer months with the organization and printing of the "Rebel Yell." This introductory booklet is the first friend to those entering Douglas Freeman as new students. Kept close at hand, especially by the eighth graders, the book is designed to familiarize students with the rules and regulations of their new school and the opportunities offered them in the new environment of Douglas Freeman.

Jorg Wasser, DSF's exchange student, received a formal welcome from John Page in the opening assembly on the first day of school. Although some students had met Jorg at a party before school opened, the school as a whole had their first opportunity to see Jorg as he greeted the student body.

As the year got under way, assembly programs were placed on the year's calendar. Each month there would be one SCA business meeting, and one program assembly. Because of the greatly increased number of students, it was necessary to present three separate programs, one for the eighth grade, another for the ninth grade, and an upper class assembly for sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Each homeroom chose an SCA council member to represent it at council meetings. These homeroom representatives presented the views of their classmates at SCA meetings, and reported to them what was being accomplished by the student government. Often the secretary's minutes were mimeographed and distributed to the homerooms in an effort to keep Freemanites better informed.

For the first time students were appointed from among the council members to serve on the various committees of the Parent-Teacher Association. The purpose was to coordinate more closely the ideas and actions of the students with those of the parents and teachers.

The SCA sent representatives from each grade to attend meetings of the Senior and Junior Standards Councils, composed of parents, teachers, and teen-age leaders from all the Richmond schools. A handbook, "Here's How," was published to guide teen-agers to a more wholesome, happy social life.

To distribute students' work more evenly throughout the week, the SCA devised a test schedule. After a trial period of six weeks, the requests of both students and teachers resulted in a modification of the plan. The test schedule was enforced only during the last week of a six-week grading period.

The main money raising project of the SCA was the production of Stunt Night, an annual variety show. A committee of students and teachers wrote the script and held tryouts for the different parts. SCA council also sponsored the sale of tickets for the three one-act plays.

Needy families in Henrico County received baskets of clothing and food prepared by the homerooms under SCA supervision.

weather conditions caused by a sudden snow. Jorg Wasser participated in a panel discussion on the foreign exchange program. In early spring DSF again sent representatives to the State Convention held at Radford College. Bobby Freeman was among four candidates for state SCA president. Other DSF delegates were Susan Ottley, Tris Hyde, and Miss Ada Land.

Election fever and spring fever hit Douglas Freeman almost simultaneously. With the arrival of warm weather, thoughts of nominations and elections for new SCA officers again took a leading role in student life. Each homeroom submitted to a central nominating committee, consisting of the SCA officers and the council members from senior homerooms, the names of four people for each of the four top offices. After considering each person, the committee selected two final nominations for each office, which were then presented to the council for approval. During the week of campaigning, every DSF student had a chance to become familiar with the candidates. Ballots were cast in the schoolwide election in early May.

At the end of the 1958 school year Jorg Wasser left Douglas Freeman and the United States for his home in Germany, taking with him Bobby Freeman. Bobby, who was picked earlier in the year by the American Field Service as the DSF student most capable of representing the American way of life abroad, planned a seven weeks' stay in Europe.

Rebels enjoy gaily decorated halls

No Rebel could ever complain about being in the dark when it came to scheduled meetings, assemblies, dances, or athletics. Students were greeted each month by a colorful calendar with the month's activities displayed prominently on a main bulletin board.

The other main bulletin board in the front hall received attention, catching the eyes, not only of Freemanites, but also of every guest visiting the school. Assigned to several members who worked together, this wall space featured a seasonal display or arresting advertisements for special school events.

In addition, the girls decorated the remaining bulletin boards to highlight the current season or holiday, or to fill the requests of school clubs. They gained experience from working on stage sets; there was a demand for their dance and banquet decorations.

Clad as a typical French artist in his smock and beret, Mr. Charles H. Smith chauffeurs his daughter, Sandie, the Art Service princess at Homecoming.

A record of the work done by each member was kept by the club secretary and was used in awarding points toward SCA letters.

Faculty advisor was DSF art teacher, Miss Ellen Copenhaver. Pat Geisst and Barbara Flippen shared responsibilities as co-chairmen. Other officers were Ada Allen, secretary, and Maria Heitzmann, treasurer.

Honor students urge sportsmanship

Deck the halls with sportsmanship banners! Trim the gym with posters!

The week of February 23 to March 1, the Rebel basketball team played Varina at DSF to wind up regular season play in District II and met three district foes at Benedictine to take the district championship. The National Honor Society co-operated with the Hi-Y during that week of their clean-up campaign to emphasize clean sportsmanship.

Clothed in long black robes, seniors share the joy and surprise of seeing their classmates selected for recognition by the National Honor Society.

Cage fans entering the crowded Rebel gym were greeted by colorful, eye-catching banners on the walls, welcoming the visiting Varinians and urging sportsmanlike behavior at the game. The NHS signs were outstanding among those displayed by all the schools in the tournament.

The honor society members who participated in this project were among 27 new members tapped in a special assembly in November. These students were selected on the basis of their outstanding leadership and service to the school as well as high character and scholarship. Following the induction ceremony a reception was held in the library for the members and their parents.

The gold honor society pins given each initiate at the fall and spring tappings are a lasting symbol of their character, ability and high standards.

Under the guidance of Miss Ada Land and Miss Carolyn Baker, the group chose Tuckie Smart as president; Elaine Drake, vice-president; Sarah Wright, secretary; and Judy Trimm, treasurer.

Whistler's mother was a man? One might think so, for in Stunt Night the famed portrait was impersonated by burly Jack Lachman. Other art classics were hilariously portrayed in the French skit, "A Visit to the Louvre."

At Christmas, the French Club entertained Marie-Claude Martini  re, foreign exchange student at Manchester High School, for a day at Douglas Freeman. She was guest of honor at the party given by the French and Spanish clubs.

Again featuring the unusual, the group cast fullback Tommy Griggs as Little Red Riding Hood for the Language Emphasis Week assembly.

In a more serious vein, French students represented their classes in the National French Tournament. Also medals were awarded winners of a prose reading contest in April.

Sponsored by Miss Carolyn Baker, the club chose the following as officers: Jane Tallman, president; Fran Webb, vice-president; Robin Cramm  , secretary; and Evie Key, treasurer.

Classical Society revives days of

Many Rebels are left completely bewildered after hearing such mystic morning announcements as, "The sub-committee on Horticulture and Numismatism will meet today in room 206." With its many unusual committee names and individual titles, the Classical Society is one of the most colorful organizations in school.

The prize winning skit in Stunt Night, a parody of the assassination of Caesar, was presented by the sub-committee on drama. All the members of the cast came from the Latin III class, with Bobby Freeman as Caesar, Tris Hyde as Brutus, and Burgess Lynch as Calpurnia. Susie Haid played Portia and Don Timberlake appeared as The Mob. Everett Fahy was a barefoot, bathrobed Mark Antony. Dave Montgomery and Bob Davis portrayed two modern students baffled by the study of ancient history.

This sub-committee also was responsible for a skit in the Language Emphasis Week assembly. The group dramatized the story of Pyramus and Thisbe from the writings of Ovid.

Although the Classical Society is composed only of Latin students, its members were interested not only in ancient Rome and its culture, but also in the cultures of every western civilization. The club sought to broaden their knowledge of classical antiquity and its many influences on our civilization.

Membership in the Classical Society is on an honorary basis. Only students with an A or B average in Latin are tapped. Induction of new members occurred in a special ceremonial assembly.

At the December party, an annual affair, new members were entertained and initiated. Later at the Spring Banquet on April 25, the newly inducted slaves, draped in sheets and clad in sandals, served the old members. The menu included only those foods which would have been found in a true Roman home.

Varied and interesting programs were monthly presentations of one of the four sub-committees. On March 25 a joint program with the Latin department of Saint Catherine's School included a talk on Roman coins by the president of the Virginia Classical Association, who is also head of the Latin department of Mary Washington College. The Lictors' Guild, which includes only male members, presented a program on athletics with a demonstration of wrestling, discus throwing, and other sports of the ancients.

Consuls Don Timberlake and Jill Gary were elected to head the club. Other officers were Tris Hyde, censor; Tish Paschall, secretarius curatorium; and Bill Mears, quaestor. Mrs. Evelyn Balthis, sponsor, assisted in all the activities of the group, including the publication of a monthly bulletin, "Liber and Audax," which contained a calendar of school and classical events.

Dr. Henry G. Balthis, guest of honor at the Classical Society's annual December Party, delivered the invocation before Consuls Jill Gary and Don Timberlake inducted new members in a formal ceremony.

Amigos learn from first-hand source

For a Spanish student what is the next best thing to a trip to Mexico?—A chance to know and to learn from a real Mexican boy.

Chavo Aguilar filled the above requirement. A native of Mexico City, he visited the United States this year as the guest of Mr. Harvey Lowder, Spanish teacher. To learn English well was Chavo's main objective, but he was kept equally busy teaching his native tongue to his American friends.

Through daily contact with Chavo, Spanish students were exposed to the culture and customs of romantic Latin America.

Dressed in authentic Mexican costumes, several members of the club participated in the Homecoming parade. Chavo and his small donkey looked like a picture from the Spanish textbook.

An exhibit of South American architecture attracted the group to the Virginia Museum. At Christmas, they joined the French Club for a party, complete with a candy-filled piñata.

Sacrificing skill and rules for entertainment, the señores and señoritas staged a comical basketball game in March.

The officers were Martha Howard, president; Carpie Gould, secretary; Linda Friedman, treasurer; and Chavo, vice-president by a unanimous vote. Mrs. Edna Meadows worked with Mr. Lowder as faculty advisor.

What secret surprises will the piñata reveal when it is broken open by Chavo Aguilar, native of Mexico?

Science fair draws clubs' interest

Pungent odors often creep from the science labs as a result of experiments conducted by members of the Chemistry-Physics and Biology Clubs. Through these, students may acquire experience and recognition in science.

Projects of both science clubs were displayed at the DSF Science Fair, and several appeared at the University of Richmond.

Library helpers learn by working

Taking her turn at the circulation desk, Bonnie Deems receives hints from Mrs. Johnson on checking out books and filing cards.

Sh-h-h!

The stilling quiet of the library is shattered only by a chair moving or a hushed whisper as students ask the library assistants for help in finding good books or reference materials. Interested in books and reading, the assistants served in the library during their study periods.

Club members assisted in routine library activities, encouraged good reading, and promoted the use of the library by the entire school. Their duties were rotated weekly, providing each one an opportunity to work at the circulation desk, to shelve books, to check permits, to process new books, to check and file magazines, and to collect overdue books and fines. It was necessary for each member to become familiar with the Dewey Decimal System and general arrangement of the library. Being of good academic standing students were able to give up easily their study periods to assist in the library.

Library assistants who gave one period a day in satisfactory service to the library were eligible to wear a gold library pin.

Many were homeroom library representatives, working with homeroom teachers to plan programs for National Book Week and National Library Week. Others aided the librarians in the preparation of colorful bulletin boards and arresting book displays.

To familiarize themselves with the material in the library, members reviewed and discussed current books at their bi-monthly club meetings. Many also attended the monthly Evenings with Books, a joint project of the library and the PTA.

Sponsored by the librarians, Mrs. Virginia Johnson and Miss Nancy Doggett, the group elected these officers: Jean Condyles, president; Bonnie Deems, vice-president; and Helen Strang, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the Christian Youth League gained schoolwide recognition when their convertible, decorated with beauty and simplicity, won the Homecoming Trophy for the outstanding parade entry.

During the year the group sponsored a clothing drive to aid needy families, led the student body in daily caroling before Christmas, and worked for the March of Dimes campaign.

The CYL was organized to unite students in Christian fellowship, work, worship, and to encourage DSF students to make use of the greatest textbook ever written, the Bible. Devotions were held each morning before school.

The CYL was under the guidance of Mrs. Joan Wampler and Mrs. Nancy Anderson. The officers were Tish Paschall, president; Carolyn Hickey, vice-president; Ellen Franklin, secretary; and Betty Mitchell, treasurer.

Business majors win recognition

Mr. Herbert Levenson crowns radiant sophomore Randy Dillard Sweetheart of the FBLA Valentine dance on February 8. Audrey Smith, club president, offers congratulations.

Hearts and Valentines, a pretty sweetheart, and a chilling February night, meant the FBLA was in the Rebel spotlight again.

Each year the Douglas Freeman Future Business Leaders of America direct much of their time and efforts toward the sponsoring of the Sweetheart Dance. This year Randy Dillard reigned as Sweetheart.

Twenty-one Douglas Freeman students participated in the regional FBLA Convention held at Mary Washington College in March. At this regional meeting, Judy Johnson was chosen Miss FBLA, an honor which is based on personal appearance, poise, and personality. Each candidate had to meet certain basic requirements in business courses. The FBLA scrapbook, compiled by Mary Butler, received a Superior rating, while the FBLA exhibit won a Merit Rating. Judy, Audrey Smith, and Lucy Perham attended the state convention.

Other projects of the Douglas Freeman chapter were bake sales and a spring picnic.

FBLA officers for 1957-8 were Audrey Smith, president; Martha Atkinson, vice-president; Lozella Conley, secretary; Judy Johnson, treasurer; and Peggy Rogers, reporter. The club is advised by Miss Dorothea Moore.

FHA practices better homemaking

Girls, are marriage and a home in your future?

The Future Homemakers of America was organized to help the youth of today better prepare for the homemaking demands of tomorrow.

Proceeds from bake sales and other money raising projects were the means of sponsoring delegates to the FHA Convention at Radford College. The girls attended conferences concerning FHA projects for the coming year. Among the speakers was the instructor of Home Economics at Radford. The president of the Future Farmers of America, a boys' organization, discussed plans for projects to be undertaken in cooperation with the FHA. A former president of the State FHA, who is now married, spoke on how the FHA had helped her.

Preparation of girls for future homemaking certainly is not all work and no play! After the conferences the girls put aside serious matters and attended a picnic in the Sunken Garden at Radford. A dance also was held in honor of the delegates.

The Douglas Freeman FHA, with members from Varina, Highland Springs and Hermitage, is part of a federation. Dogwood Dell was the scene of a picnic and rally at which the officers of the federation were installed. Jo Bayne of Douglas Freeman was elected vice-president.

As a service project the girls planted a rose bush in the bus traffic circle during National FHA Week. The FHA hopes to continue this idea in coming years.

Well-dressed girls, modeling their own handmade creations, presented a fashion show for the students at Douglas Freeman in May. Each model made the outfit she was wearing and chose complementary accessories.

Proud mothers, attending the mother-daughter banquet held at DSF for the entire federation, were delighted to see many of their daughters modeling suits, dresses, and complete ensembles which the girls themselves had produced. The principals of the schools belonging to the federation also were invited to the banquet.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Martha Perkins, the officers elected for the year were Jo Bayne, president; Dorothy Clay, vice-president; Pat Trice, secretary; Betsy Snead, treasurer; Arthea Crowder and Elaine Walker, song leaders; Eunice Satterwhite, historian; and Nancy Hicks, parliamentarian.

Future nurses start careers early

One of the school's newer clubs, the FNA was organized to give Douglas Freeman girls interested in nursing a better understanding of the requirements and rewards of this career. Mrs. Jean O'Keefe, the school nurse and club advisor, hopes the group can help students to decide whether they wish to devote a better part of their futures to medicine.

Among its projects for this year, the Future Nurses sent Hallowe'en tray favors to the Home for Incurables and made stuffed toys for the Piedmont Sanatorium at Christmas. The girls also took flowers, fudge, and fruit to the City Home in May.

FNA members gained valuable knowledge and experience from guest speakers, movies, and field trips to different hospitals. At the Richmond Academy of Medicine, the girls saw an exhibit on eighteenth century medicine. They also attended the Physical Therapy Open House at the Medical College of Virginia. Some of the girls worked as clinic assistants during their study halls.

The club had a special shelf in the library for books and pamphlets pertaining to nursing. In the fall the Future Nurses prepared a bulletin board display which dealt with medical careers.

Sent from Douglas Freeman as delegates to the Virginia State Nurses Association Convention at the Jefferson Hotel were Mary June Davis and Faris Alley. Other members attended sessions of the convention after school hours.

The officers were Mary June Davis, president; Faris Alley, vice-president; Jill Gary, secretary; and Brenda Falls, treasurer.

Y-Teen cabinets direct activities

To the sound of humming sewing machines, members of Y-Teens Triangle Two were transformed into industrious seamstresses, busily helping Santa during the Christmas rush. A group of gaily dressed dolls was delivered to the homes of needy children as a Yuletide project of this triangle.

A vacation spent at camp with new things to do and new people to meet will hold excitement for some small girl this summer. Y-Teens Triangle One chose to send an underprivileged child to camp as their main service project for the year.

The other programs and projects of the two groups were just as varied. Jorg Wasser, DSF's foreign exchange student, received subscriptions to the Commentator and the Historian from Triangle II. To help finance their Christmas Dance, each triangle member sold two cans of Sachet Mist. Many girls found themselves paying for the scented spray from their own purses, since the urge to shower the boys in school was irresistible.

Entertaining the veterans at McGuire's Hospital was a service project which brought out the hidden talents of several members. Others in Triangle II turned Scottish for a dance number that was an outstanding feature of Stunt Night.

Proving their value as a service organization, Triangle I tackled several projects. Among these were canvassing the western end of Henrico county for the Muscular Dystrophy Drive, delivering baskets of fruit to elderly people at the City Home, and singing carols there at Christmas.

A point system, similar to that of the SCA, was devised to reward hard working members. The girl who accumulated the most points during the school year received the title, Miss Y-Teen Triangle I.

A panel including Hi-Y and Y-Teen members debated dating customs at one Triangle II meeting. "Smitty," Miller and Rhoads' Teen Consultant Ethel Smith, was another program feature, discussing "Fashion and the Teen-Age Female."

Spring fun included a Triangle II swimming party at the YWCA.

Key club projects vary greatly

Chef Binford Leake mixes the secret Key Club formula used to prepare the fancy flapjacks served at Pancake Day.

Is the Key Club affiliated with the home economics department? One would certainly think so, after tasting the delightful meal prepared by Key Club members on Pancake Day. In an effort to raise money for the March of Dimes, the Key Club cooked and served hot cakes to those attending Parents' Visitation Day in February.

Actually the Key Club was not organized to train future cooks, but is a junior service organization sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, a national men's organization.

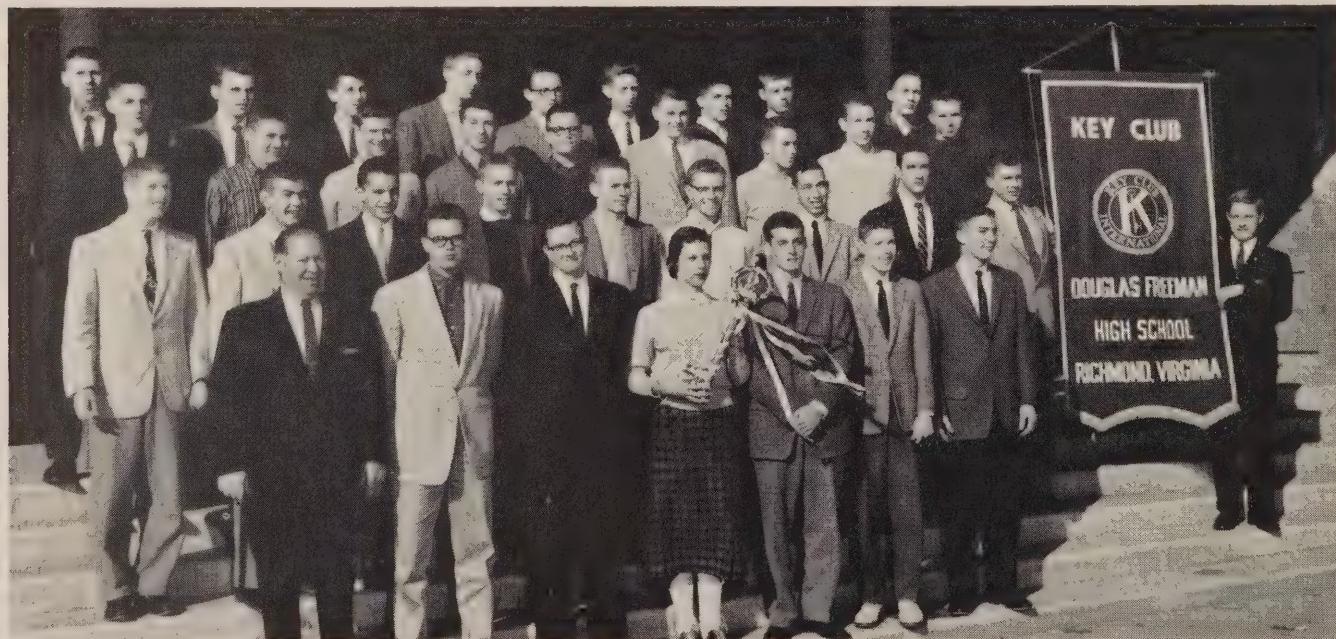

Two members of the DSF club attended the Central District Convention held at the Hotel Jefferson in Richmond. The conclave was a weekend affair, with representatives from Virginia, Delaware, and Maryland. The Key Club took a first place trophy with its exceptional scrapbook.

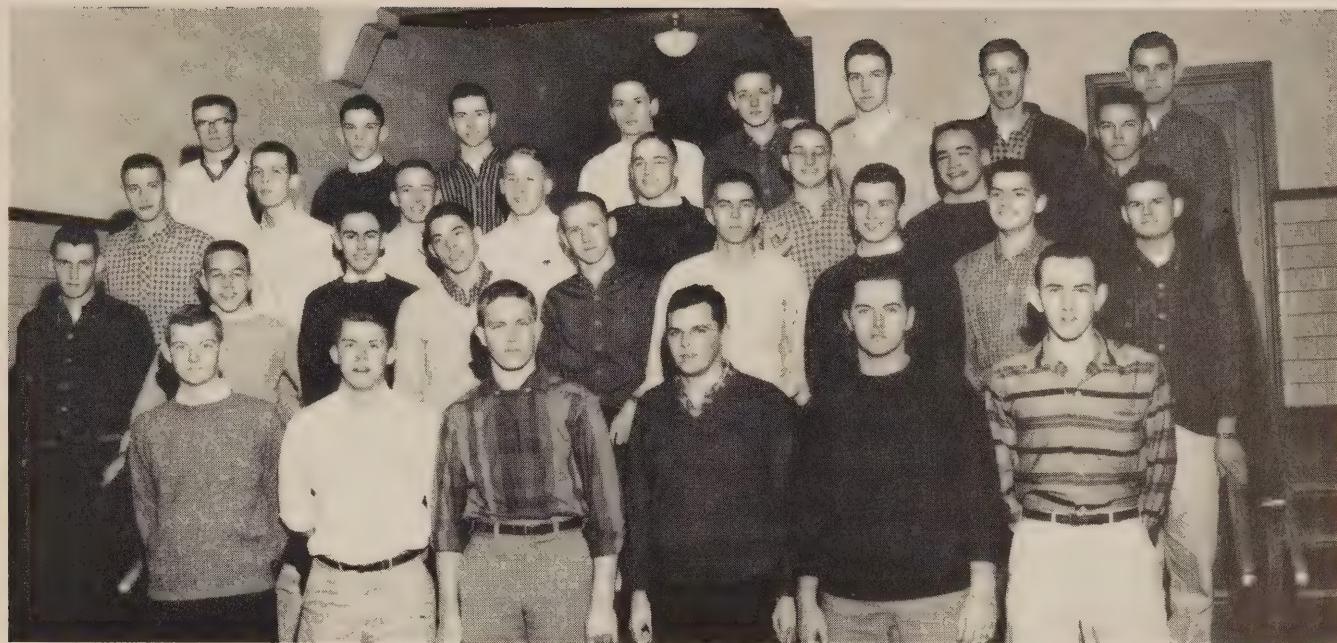

The Key Club was very active this year with a wide variety of projects. Among these were a rummage sale, assisting the PTA with its membership drive, directing school traffic in the mornings and afternoons, distributing containers for the Nephrosis Drive, a car wash, and the sale of DSF sweat shirts and T-shirts.

Susan Murphrey, Key Club Sweetheart, acted as hostess on several occasions.

The club is under the guidance of Colonel W. M. Mack. The members elected Wilton Curtis as president; Tommy Smith, vice-president; Don Timberlake, secretary; and Pat Burke, treasurer.

Service club adds to Rebel vocabulary

"Gorebs" were new at DSF this year, but it did not take long for them to become part of the daily conversation. The Hi-Y receives credit for the introduction. One of the banners displayed during the service club's clean-up campaign, had "gorebs" (Go Rebs!) in bold red letters, and the word remained as much a vital part of each Freemanite's vocabulary as Confetti and Johnny Reb.

The boys used their Hi-Y platform as the basis of a schoolwide clean-up campaign, stressing weekly one of the four points of the platform. The topics—clean speech, clean sportsmanship, clean living, and clean scholarship—were introduced to the school in special assemblies in February and were emphasized with morning announcements, and posters.

At Christmas homerooms throughout the school, directed jointly by the Hi-Y and the SCA, prepared over 100 baskets of food, clothing, and toys for the Henrico Christmas Mother. Rebel representatives to the City-wide Council of Hi-Y achieved recognition as members of this group elected Jack Gary and Craig Van Natta their president and vice-president respectively.

To benefit the World Service YMCA, the Hi-Y presented a jazz concert emceed by radio announcer Bob Joyce and featuring Richmond jazz talent, May 9 in the auditorium.

At their regular Monday night meeting at school, the boys heard talks by such outstanding members of the community as Dr. George Ritchie. At other meetings, the group viewed movies of Rebel football games or worked out in the gym.

Social functions included two picnics at Camp Richmond for members and their dates, one in October and another in April. During basketball season members formed a team which competed with Hi-Y clubs from other schools. They broke even, 2-2.

The officers were Jack Gary, president; Tris Hyde, vice-president; Craig Van Natta, secretary; Fritz Hart, treasurer; Billy Wiltshire, chaplain; and Billy Powers, sergeant-at-arms. Advisors were Mr. Bill Clark and Mr. Ralph Crockett.

DSF triple trio sings way to fame

Glancing over music, Downbeats Judy Wallace, Carpie Gould, Marty Howard, and Susan Ottley consider new arrangements at their weekly practice session.

The melodious voices of nine South Sea Island misses and the swish of grass skirts carried this year's Stunt Night audience on a musical tour to the land of the hula.

These nine young ladies formed the Douglas Freeman Downbeats, a triple trio directed by Mrs. Joan Wampler. Clad in identical green jumpers, and accompanied at the piano by Tuckie Smart, the melody-minded nine entertained at various functions, many not connected with Douglas Freeman.

At school they appeared at the Y-Teen Christmas Dance, the Key Club Pancake Day, and several school assemblies. Boys from three states heard the triple trio sing at the Key Club Regional Convention. Again in the DSF spotlight, they were a special added attraction of Junior Talent Night.

Tryouts are held each spring to fill the vacant spaces created by the graduating members. To be chosen as a Downbeat member from the large number of candidates who try out, a girl must be attractive and have a pleasant personality, in addition to her singing ability.

The special arrangements of old favorites and popular tunes sung by the Downbeats were prepared by Mrs. Wampler, daughter of Eddie Weaver. Practices were held weekly.

Serving as officers this year were Martha Howard, president; Susan Ottley, vice-president; Carpie Gould, secretary-treasurer; Judy Trimm, historian; and Judy Wallace, recorder.

The chilly days of February found glee club members scrambling around in attics and trunks, assembling old-fashioned chemises and knickers they needed for costumes in DSF's second operetta.

Their musical comedy Good News! was a light-hearted spoofing of campus customs in the flapper era. Many of the principal roles were acted and sung by members of the mixed chorus. Others played sorority girls and campus heroes. Creating the musical atmosphere of the 1920's were Mrs. Joan Wampler at the organ, Tuckie Smart at the piano, Mr. Hunter Purdie playing bass, and Roger Pounders on drums.

At Christmas their caroling echoed in the halls. Their Yuletide party climaxed a drive promoting the sale of Rebel arm patches.

The Night of Music, the music department's spring concert, featured a varied group of selections by the glee club. A highlight was the calypso "Banana Boat Song," with an accompaniment of bongo drums and maracas.

The group won a rating of excellent in the State Music Festival in the spring. Several members represented Douglas Freeman at the All-Central State Chorus at Hermitage High School. DSF participants were sopranos Madeline MacNeil, Mildred Burnette, and Sarah Carter; altos Susie Haid and Linda Johnson; tenors Toby Merkel, Sonny Gilman, Carl Banks, and Howard Leith; and basses Robert Haid and Jimmy Carr.

The glee club was directed in daily rehearsals by Mr. Purdie. Officers for the year were Ellen Jolly, president; Madeline MacNeil, vice-president; Susie Haid, secretary; and Carolyn Hickey, treasurer.

Music and color set rhythm

Walnut Fudge?
No, mint!

These were familiar words to Freemanites as the Band and Glee Club members sold candy to raise money for a new set of tympani for the Band and risers for the Glee Club. At the end of the sale almost every Freemanite had at least sampled the candy, and the Band and Glee Club had reached their goal.

The Douglas Freeman Band, playing host to more than twenty other high school bands during the District Music Festival, received the top rating of superior. David Olton, DSF tuba player, was the only soloist to receive a superior rating at the Festival. Fourteen members of the DSF Band were chosen to participate in the Virginia Central All-State Band at Highland Springs High School.

The band participated in several functions away from school. Among these were the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester, the Tobacco Festival Parade and the Memorial Day parade in Richmond. The Rebel aggregation was one of 23 units in a mass band which performed during the halftime of the University of Virginia-Clemson football game.

In the Night of Music at school the Band played a varied group of selections ranging from difficult concert music to spirited marches. A highlight was the "North Sea Overture," which featured sound effects from a wind machine.

The music makers played a major role in encouraging school spirit throughout the year at pep rallies and football games. Ingenuity and imagination resulted in several clever halftime capers. Among these was the musical skit, "Junior Joins the Band." The Band dramatized Junior's infancy by playing a medley of nursery songs. Junior's musical career grew as he progressed to bugler at summer camp and finally found a place in a professional dance band.

For concerts the group mastered a comical selection appropriately called "Goofin," which is filled with colorful antics that never failed to bring gasps and giggles from an unsuspecting audience. During this arrangement a clarinet player nonchalantly saunters in after the Band has begun, seats himself, pulls out his horn, and blows . . . a discordant wrong note! Midway in the number a drummer, shot by a clarinetist, falls dead to the accompaniment of crashing cymbals and clattering tin cans.

Barry Steinberg served as drum major of the 60-member unit. Officers elected were Charlie Clough, president; Steve Matthews, vice-president; and Herb Sanborn and Jay Robinson, librarians.

The six girls traveled with the band to the U. Va.-Clemson game in Charlottesville and also appeared with them in the Tobacco Bowl Parade in Richmond. In rhythm with the band the majorettes performed spirited routines with Confederate flags at several pep rallies. Joanna Gallasch served as head majorette for 1957-58.

Boys, boys everywhere, but not a one will sing!

This was the problem Mrs. Joan Wampler had to face when she held tryouts for a vocal class last spring. When boys did not appear for the planned mixed glee club, Mrs. Wampler simply changed the name of the class, and the Girls' Glee Club was created. For many, membership in this smaller group would lead to participation in the Douglas Freeman Glee Club.

Although the group was new, it took part in assemblies, the Night of Music, and the school operetta, "Good News," as well as in the District Choral Festival in the spring.

Accompanist for the girls was Charlotte Grinnan.

Young scientists look to the future

Douglas Freeman students, even underclassmen, are up-to-date in world affairs and are conscious of the need for more scientists.

Eighth and ninth graders who had an "A" or "B" average in science organized themselves to gain a broader knowledge of science and its more advanced branches, chemistry, biology and physics.

Each member completed a project during the year for exhibition at the Science Fair in May, to which parents were invited. Several students made models of the solar system, while others did experiments. Other projects included collections of rocks and leaves, charts showing the evolution of animals and experiments concerning energy. The most outstanding were displayed at the University of Richmond.

Under the direction of Mrs. Marguerite Trent, the officers elected this year were Olivia Gibson, president; Kenny Iseman, vice-president; Nancy Holt, secretary; and Carole Gibson, treasurer.

The low hum of activity that indicates a student publication staff is at work sometimes becomes a roar when a deadline approaches. The young journalists not only work during the staff period but also spend after-school hours editing the yearbook and the newspaper.

Two publications work together

"Watch out! Here comes a spy from that other publication!"

A standing joke at Douglas Freeman, these words will always bring a laugh in the newsrooms, 100 and 209. While the staff members of the Commentator and the HISTORIAN co-operate fully in order to present the school with the best publications possible, a strong esprit de corps is characteristic of both staffs, and the feeling of friendly competition causes staff secrets to be closely guarded until publication dates.

Although some students work for both newspaper and yearbook, the majority decide at the end of their sophomore year to devote all of their time to one or the other.

The Publications Committee, which includes all faculty advisors of publications, determines overall policies and decides on questions which concern both Commentator and HISTORIAN. The committee meets before new staffs are announced each spring, before Quill and Scroll tappings, and to set policies governing school representation at the press conventions at Columbia University and Washington and Lee in Lexington.

Both publications consistently have won high ratings in competition with high school periodicals across the nation.

Quill and Scroll entertains at banquet

Sprawled comfortably in the middle of the stage floor, Elaine Drake and Nina Lawson touch up gold paint on the Quill and Scroll emblem used at the Publications Banquet. Nina served as president of the group this year.

A pen for a quill . . . a sheet of paper for a scroll. These traditional tools are used by today's high school journalists. The quill and the scroll, writing implements of ages past, are the symbols of a national honorary group which recognizes outstanding achievement by those who write and edit the student publications of America's secondary schools.

To be selected for membership in the Quill and Scroll, a student must be of junior standing, rank scholastically in the upper third of his class, and have done superior work in some phase of journalism. He must be recommended by the advisor of his publication and approved by the national executive-secretary of Quill and Scroll.

Holding the first tapping of the year in October, the Douglas Freeman chapter presented an impressive ceremony witnessed by DSF's upper-classmen and the parents of those inducted. Bill Ivey and Peggy Dickinson, who were selected for membership in the spring of 1957, tapped 18 girls into the organization. Following the tapping, excited initiates and proud parents attended a reception in the library.

To give initiates who were absent the thrill of being tapped, the new members did a bit of hasty planning. At home recovering from the flu, Judy Wilburn was surprised at noon by black robed members. Plans were made to induct Tuckie Smart as she stepped from the plane on her return from a safety convention in Chicago. When bad weather delayed her plane, these plans were abandoned.

A year's hard work on school publications was rewarded when Quill and Scroll entertained members of both staffs, their parents and publications advisors at the traditional banquet in May. Highlighting the evening were the tapping of new members and the presentation of the Best Cub and other special awards. Speaker for the evening was Mr. Ernest W. Mooney, assistant principal of Thomas Jefferson High School, whose journalistic experience includes work with high school and the Richmond newspapers.

Remembrances collected in Historian

The HISTORIAN was born during the hot, sticky days of late summer. At this time, the editors met with Miss Marian Breeden and Miss Carol Jones, HISTORIAN literary advisors, to begin planning the forthcoming yearbook.

The first job was the difficult one of picking a theme. Lengthy debate preceded a final decision as staff members realized they must work with the theme they chose for almost a year, and that the theme must reflect the life of the school and the community.

Of course, this was only the beginning; hours, developing into weeks and months, were consumed in the seemingly endless process of creating the new HISTORIAN.

Through constant work on the yearbook during the fourth period study each day, staff members exercised their talents and creative abilities in the fields of art, writing and design, learning to work with cooperation, speed, and efficiency.

Advance planning and up-to-date records enabled staff members to meet deadlines and keep track of the many layouts and write-ups involved in the publication of the yearbook. As do all organizations, the HISTORIAN staff had its mild catastrophes and moments of panic, when editors frantically hunted for lost pictures or harried writers tried to make cutlines fit. These soon faded away to memories, leaving the staff days to continue in their usual pattern!

Each of the five sections in the yearbook—sports, features, organizations, faculty, and classes—has an editor or co-editor. The number of assistants each editor has varies according to the size of the section. In addition, the staff has two art editors. Working closely with the editor-in-chief, they strive to develop effectively the theme of the book through the cover, introductory pages, and division pages.

By studying the ratings on the yearbook from the various press associations, staff members discover weak points in layout design and copy writing, and work to correct these errors in their own sections.

Each year the HISTORIAN is entered for judging by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York City, the National Scholastic Press Association in Minneapolis, and the Southern Interscholastic Press Association at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, to be ranked competitively with yearbooks from all over the country.

The 1957 HISTORIAN received a first place rating at NSPA and ranking of second place at Columbia. At the SIPA convention the 1957 annual captured a first place. Representing the 1957-58 staff at the convention in Lexington in April were Ada Allen, Sara Farley, and Carrie Lee Tepper.

Financing annual is year-round job

Tramp, tramp, tramp all over town! Freemanites, spurred on by the desire to become a member of the HISTORIAN Business Staff, sought to obtain at least three advertisements before September 13.

To avoid confusion, students either volunteered or were assigned to contact certain businesses from the staff file of prospective advertisers organized by ad manager Mary June Davis. To remain on the staff, each student had to meet the minimum quota of three ads. Junior Billy Wiltshire won a free yearbook for contracting the largest number of advertisements.

In financing the HISTORIAN, the staff found the income from advertising and subscriptions inadequate to meet the heavy demands of publishing a book. For this reason this year each club and athletic organization paid for its yearbook pages and pictures. Group and individual pictures, and snapshots were put on sale as another of the staff's projects.

A colorful advertising campaign preceded the subscription drive, handled efficiently by homeroom representatives. Subscription manager Tuckie Smart enlisted the aid of artists on the literary staff in designing the eye catching posters. Even the football fans were aware of the drive for subscriptions as the cheerleaders plugged the HISTORIAN with a halftime stunt using flashcards.

The new business manager, Susan Ottley, was announced in early spring. As a delegate to the Southern Interscholastic Press Association in April, she gained valuable knowledge and new ideas for the organization of the staff responsibilities.

Audrey Smith was business manager for the '58 HISTORIAN. Miss Dorothea Moore was the staff advisor.

Commentator strives for perfection

The Commentator Cubs pulled the coup of the year with their April Fools' extra issue, so closely-guarded a secret that not even the editor-in-chief of the paper knew of it in advance of its publication!

The enterprise and imagination displayed by the Cubs is typical of the entire staff of the newspaper. To answer the question, "How professional can a high school paper be?" the Commentator took the top award, Medalist, at the Columbia Scholastic Press Association Convention in New York City in March. This distinction ranked the DSF publication as one of the top ten newspapers in the country among schools of 1,000-1,500 students.

The hardworking editors received much of their material from the journalism class. Composed of juniors interested in journalism and aiming toward a position on the Commentator staff, the class works for 18 weeks learning the basic principles of journalism and applying these rules through weekly class assignments.

During the second semester, the new journalists see their work in print as they contribute stories regularly to the paper. Selected in the spring, the new staff puts out the last issue of the paper, stepping into the shoes of the more experienced editors.

Four members of the class become representatives to the city newspapers. Known as "Youth Page Editors," they see that Douglas Freeman receives publicity on the weekly youth pages of the Times-Dispatch and the News Leader. Considered a member of the staff of the city paper for which they write, these editors are paid for their work. The money goes into a journalism fund used for a variety of projects. One of these was a plaque bearing the names of students deserving recognition for their achievements in various fields, which was presented to the school last spring. When the staff decided to pay the expenses of Miss Shirley Ward, Commentator faculty advisor, as Another source of material is a group of potential reporters, the Cub Club, fifteen lower classmen working under the direction of Miss Ward. A student gains one of the coveted positions in this group only after having submitted a story through his English teacher to Miss Ward. The final selection of new Cubs is made by the newspaper faculty advisors acting on recommendations by the individual teachers. When a Cub has published 15 inches in the paper and secured an ad, he moves up to the staff as a reporter, and a student in the Sub-Cub Club replaces him as a Cub.

"The Romancers," a romantic comedy with an unexpected ending, starred Everett Fahy and Pat Meagher and won a distinguished rating in District II competition and a superior rating at the State One-Act Play Festival. A Broadway actress, Margaret Cole, came to know a New England invalid, Burgess Lynch, while trying to buy her doorknob in "The Purple Doorknob." "A Young Lady of Property" portrayed psychologically the attempt of a young girl, Susan Shewmake, to regain the security her childhood home.

that climaxed the year. Tension mounted as the football star approached his re-exam in astronomy. His failing grade ignored, he went on to win the game and the girl of his dreams. The Charleston, muskrat coats, and the Varsity Drag brought the jazz of the period into the production. Toby Merkel and Joe deTreville were a pair that added amusement with their wise cracks, snappy dress, and dancing.

Floats, princesses, game greet alumni

Weeks of planning and preparation culminated in Douglas Freeman's second Homecoming on October 25. In the days preceding the Friday night meeting of the Rebel gridders and Louisa's high-spirited eleven, the cheerleaders, under Mrs. McAllister, supervised decoration of the floats for the parade and the selection of the princesses.

As an innovation, the Queen's court this year included representatives of most school organizations. Working feverishly, these groups decorated cars, trucks, and even donkeys for the pre-game parade. Winner of the trophy for the best parade unit was the Christian Youth League convertible.

Select seniors play at Vinita Farm

The highly coveted Who's Who award means more to a senior than a picture in the yearbook and the gold emblem presented at the Senior Court Dance. To the winner the honor represents the affection and esteem of his friends, those with whom he has lived and worked through the four years of high school.

Selection of senior superlatives was a well-guarded HISTORIAN secret until the night of March 22 when the winners were announced at the Senior Court Dance.

Following preliminary nominations made in senior homerooms, final choices were made by a vote of the class, and the pictures taken the next week at Vinita Farm, the River Road home of senior Linda Friedman.

Rebel mentors produce championship teams

Mrs. Nancy Anderson shows surprise in a tense Rebelette basketball game. Betty Gierhart looks on with anxiety.

As the 3:16 bell rang, for most people the end of a long day had arrived, but to the Rebel coaching staff it was the start of a brand new day.

Through the years DSF has grown in size and quality. To keep up with the tempo of overall progress, Athletic Director W. E. Long and his staff of coaches have improved and broadened athletics at Douglas Freeman. Adding wrestling, golf, tennis, and indoor track to the established sports, football, basketball, baseball, and outdoor track, the coaches relinquished their free time without pay to guide interested Freemanites in the sports program.

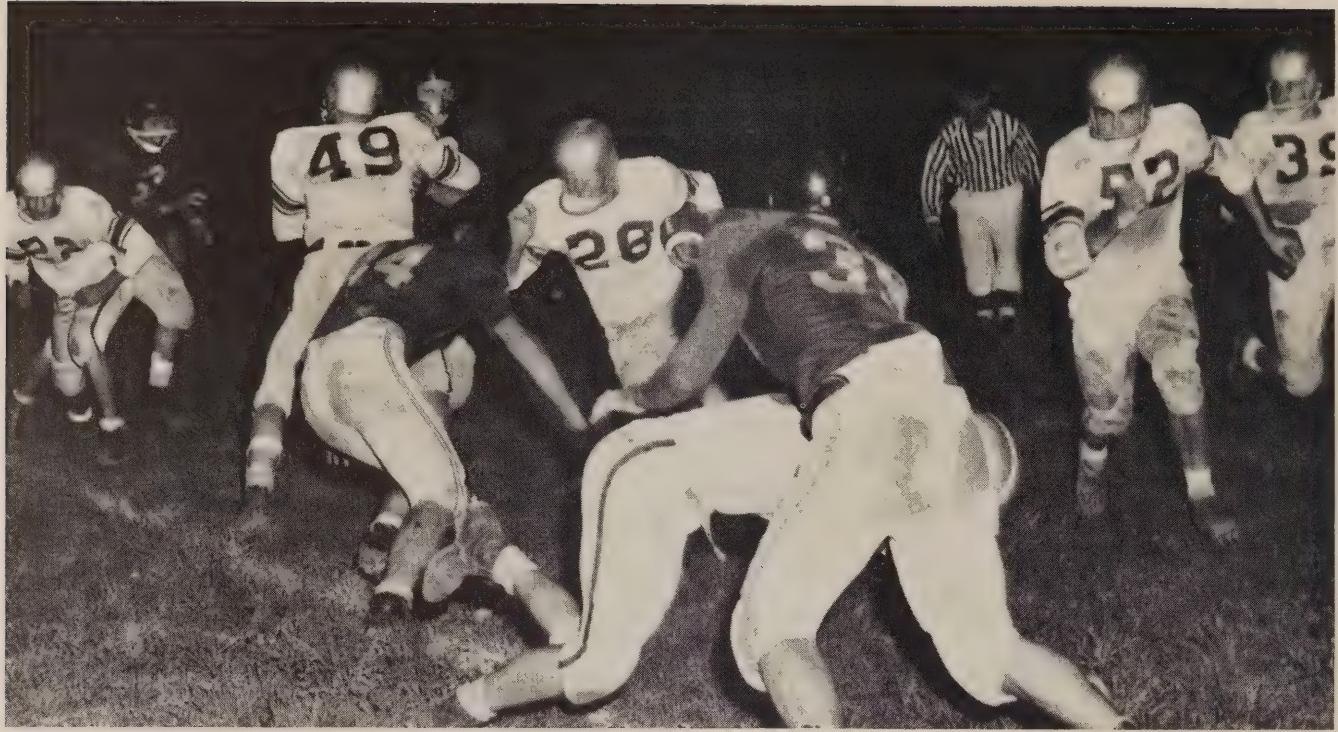

Mrs. Nancy Anderson, in her first year of coaching girls' basketball demonstrated the enthusiasm and leadership that is characteristic of Douglas Freeman's coaches.

Broad grins indicate the emotions of Bill Wood and Coach W. E. Long just after the Rebels won the District 2 championship trophy.

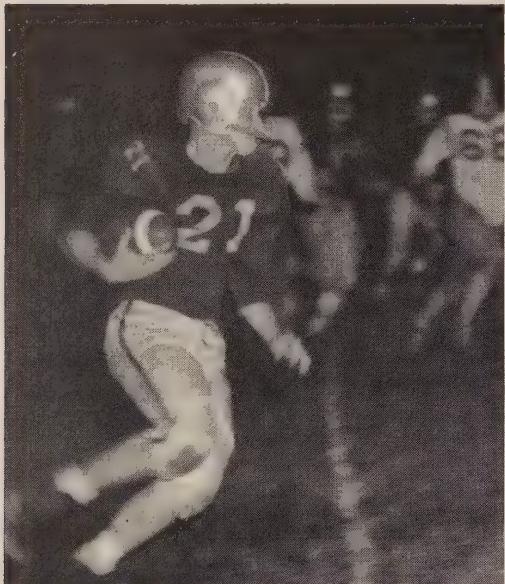

Before beginning another practice session, Rebel coaches Bill Clark, Ray Long, Jon Massello, and Ralph Crockett look over the daily pre-school football schedule, held by head coach W. E. Long.

Signal caller Lee Krost smashes into Saint defender Rye Ayers on a quarterback option. Howard Clark (49) and Parker Dillard take out their men as fullback Tommy Griggs (52) and halfback Bobby Freeman (39) sweep around end to add downfield blocking.

Blue and Gray bow out of Group II

Scatback Steve Stevenson shifts gears into full speed and streaks up the sidelines to gain long yardage against the Louisa eleven before a Homecoming crowd of 3,000 chilled but cheering Rebel fans.

For the third consecutive year the Rebel coaches produced an outstanding varsity football team. With coach W. E. Long at the helm, the grididers compiled a 6-1-3 record. Line coach Ray Long, in his first year at that post, and end coach Jon Massello were invaluable in the Rebels' success.

After losing over twenty boys from last year's squad, the Blue and Gray were forced to build around a nucleus of juniors. Nevertheless, Douglas Freeman players dominated the All-Suburban eleven. Backs Tommy Griggs and Bobby Freeman, and linemen Paul Dickinson, Joe Lax, and Billy Powers were named to the first team. Griggs, the Rebels' iron horse, and Dickinson, a tremendous lineman in both size and play, were selected for the All-Group II District 2 squad as well. Bobby Freeman received honorable mention.

As always, players and coaches received most of the credit, but four more boys worked very hard with little recognition. These were the four tireless managers, John Irby, Buddy Hudson, Chris Stokes, and Bobby Fleet.

This season was the last for the Blue and Gray in Group II. Next year the Rebels will enter the Central District of Group I! With only eight boys graduating, Rebel grid fans look forward to a successful first season in Group I competition.

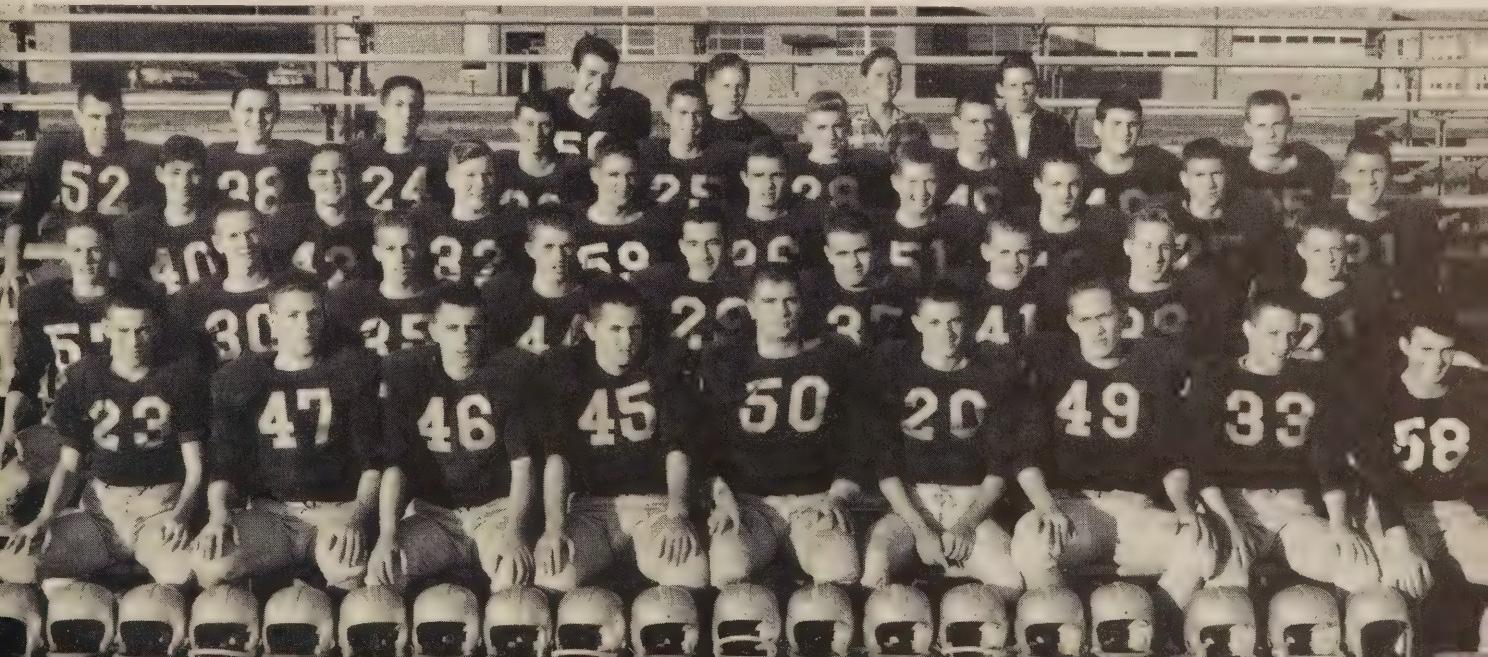

End Parker Dillard throws a crushing body block in a fiercely contested game with the Saints to open the way for a Rebel back.

Tommy Griggs (52) eyes the field ahead after taking a pitch-out from quarterback Lee Krost (26), who leads interference.

DSF 33—WASHINGTON-HENRY 0

The fourth football season at Douglas Freeman opened with an impressive 33-0 victory over Washington-Henry. The Rebels showed an explosive offense directed by co-captains Billy Powers and Lee Krost.

DSF 46—MIDLOTHIAN 18

The Blue and Gray chalked up their second win by rolling past Midlothian. The Trojans could not hold back the overpowering onslaught of the Rebel backfield.

DSF 6—SAINT CHRISTOPHER 21

Arch-rival St. Christopher invaded Douglas Freeman's stadium in a grudge game that saw the Blue and Gray fall to the Maroons. Ahead 7-6, the Saints scored two fourth quarter touchdowns to maintain mastery in the series.

DSF 20—JAMES MONROE 0

Taking to the road for the first time, the gridders, inspired by Freddie Kunclrs' two long scoring jaunts, broke up a hard-fought game in the third quarter for a shut-out of highly-touted James Monroe. Sterling line play was again decisive.

DSF 20—ALBEMARLE 20

The high-riding Rebels next met the perennially powerful Patriots of Albemarle. Three touchdowns, two by Tommy Griggs, failed to frighten the Patriots as they roared back with three second-stanza TDs to tie the game.

DSF 13—LOUISA 6

Homecoming brought an underdog Louisa eleven to the Rebel gridiron on October 25. Led by Tris Hyde and a revised backfield, the Rebs capitalized on a Green and White fumble to take a 6-0 halftime lead. Halfback Steve Stevenson's nine-yard end run climaxed a 71-yard drive to put out the Louisa fire.

DSF 6—THOMAS DALE 6

Meeting their first Group I football opposition, the greatly favored Rebels were baffled by a determined Black Knight eleven. Hurt by fumbles and penalties, the Blue and Gray managed to eke out a tie as Tommy Griggs bulled over in the waning moments of the contest for six points.

DSF 19—VARINA 0

November 8 proved to be the District 2 showdown as the squad dropped previously undefeated Varina from the championship ranks. Tackle Howard Clark's crushing blocks and the spectacular long gains of the shifty Stevenson highlighted the Rebel smashing of the outclassed Blue Devils.

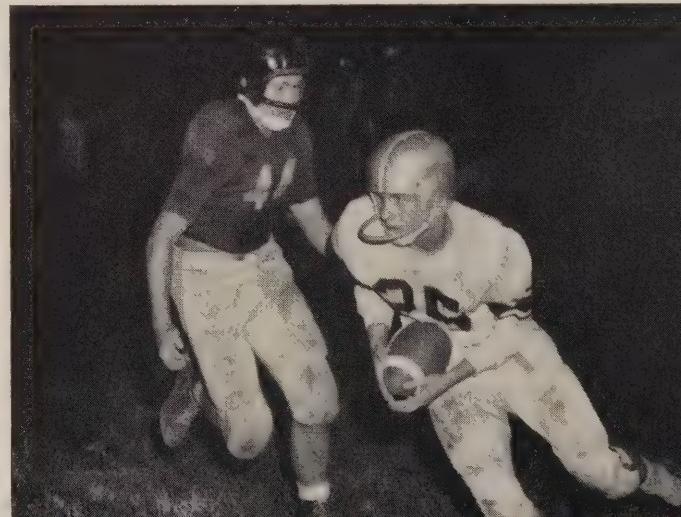

DSF 12—POWHATAN 7

Surprised by an underdog Powhatan squad, the Rebel eleven had to fight from behind in the fourth quarter to defeat the Indians. 47- and 25-jaults by Stevenson and end Parker Dillard set up the touchdowns, both by Griggs. The win moved the Rebels one step closer to the district championship.

DSF 14—ORANGE 14

November 22 brought the Orange Hornets to the Rebel field for a game that decided the district championship. Despite the brilliant running display of Bobby Freeman, the Rebels failed to make good on a last minute scoring attempt.

Freddie Kunclrs (25) treads the sideline to slip past Rye Ayers of Saint Christopher in the last quarter.

Bobby Freeman (39) fights his way through a horde of James Monroe defenders. Rushing in are Howard Clarke (49), Paul Flynn (29), and Tommy Griggs.

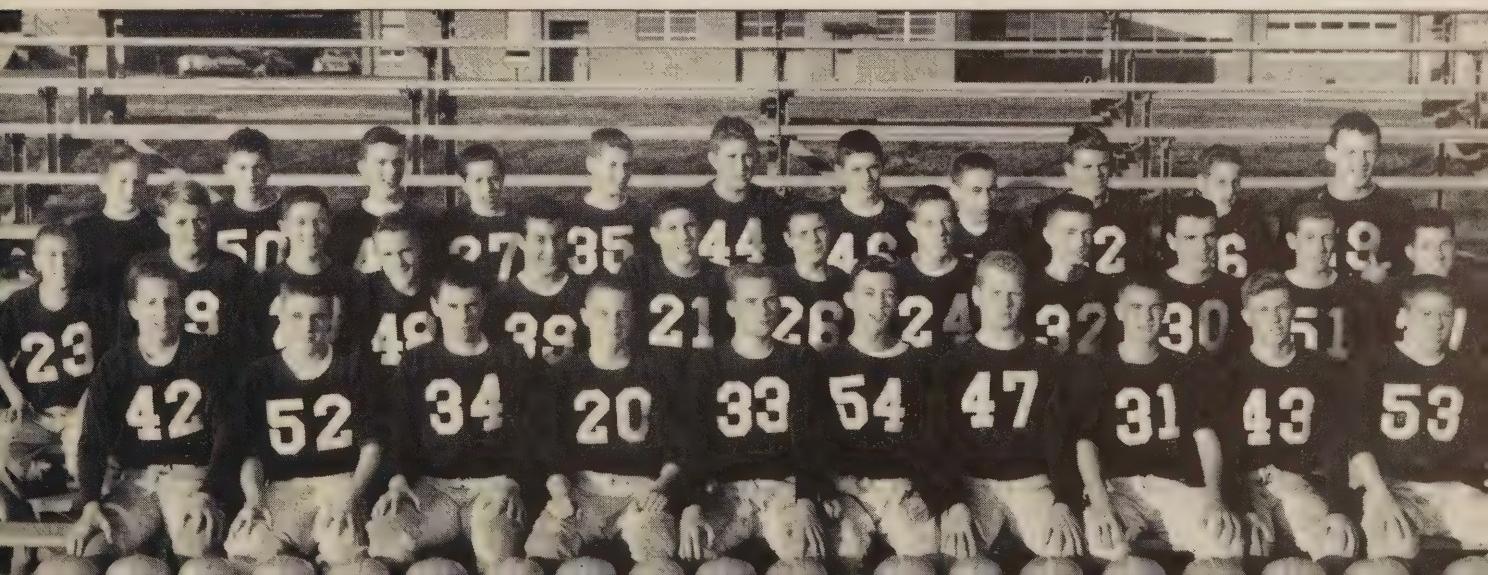

Tommy Griggs (52) struggles to break away for some yardage at midfield in the Rebels' game with Louisa. Griggs was known as the "horse."

DSF junior eleven wins five to compile initial winning season

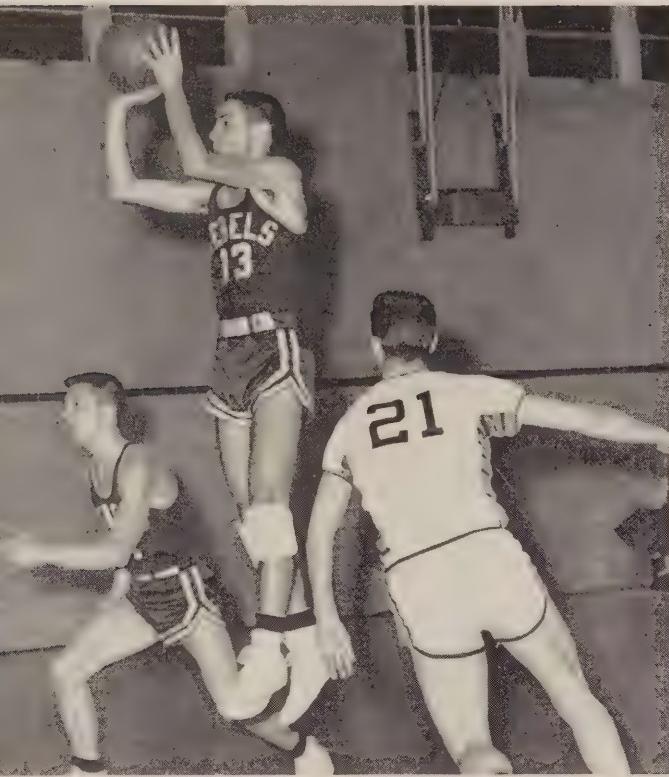

The 1957 baby gridders posted a winning record for the first time with a 5-3 mark. The Rebs mauled Varina, 39-6, and on an extremely muddy field defeated Colonial Heights, 20-13. The Blue and Gray went down only to Saint Christopher, undefeated Albert Hill, and powerful Manchester.

Sophomore George Matuck and freshman Steve Greenberg alternated at quarterback, directing the explosive running of backs Jerry Thompson, Bobby Tomlin, and Walter Flynn. Coached this year by Ralph Crockett, the squad was consistent in its display of a fired-up enthusiasm and good sportsmanship.

Flashy guard Jerry Radford drives in for a lay-up in a District 2 showdown with Albemarle. John Page Rawlings stands by to help.

The Douglas Freeman basketball team, in their Group II finale, completed the most successful cage season in the history of the school, finishing with an overall record of 18-4.

Paced by 6'4" Jimmy Blunt and guard David Wilson, DSF representatives on the all tournament teams for both District 2 and Group II, the Rebels demolished every district foe. Following their tournament triumphs in District 2, the cagers went on to the state tournament in Blacksburg. After defeating southwest power and tournament favorite Clintwood 64-63 in overtime on Jimmy Blunt's last second lay-up, the Blue and Gray lost to a spirited Great Bridge team.

Displaying a deadly fast break and an impenetrable zone defense during the regular season, the hardwood five humbled Varina twice to clinch the district title. The Rebels also massacred the Indians of Powhatan 100-21, becoming the third area club in recent years to break the century mark.

The cagers entered the district tournament with a 10-0 record in district play. Following consecutive victories over Midlothian and Stafford, they proceeded to seize the school's first cage championship with a 51-42 victory over Orange. Against Midlothian, a new school record for one game was set by Blunt's 32 points. His season total of 324 points was the highest in DSF's history.

The Rebels were led by tri-captains Blunt, Bill Wood and John Page Rawlings. Along with Jerry Radford, guards Rawlings and Wilson produced some dazzling displays of dribbling as well as outstanding floor work. Wood, a very consistent scorer (245 points for the season) was also a big man under the boards. He saw only limited service in the Great Bridge encounter due to a sprained ankle. The sixth man in the Rebel lineup was Lee Krost, who hit stride at the end of the season and scored in double-digits in all three games at Blacksburg.

Smitty Smith, Tommy Griggs and Steve Stevenson gave the Blue and Gray a bench that was a key factor in the strategy of tiring the opposition.

Sporting new dark blue uniforms and gray warm-up jackets this year, the Rebels added snappy knee socks at midseason, making them one of the best dressed squads to take to the court in this locality.

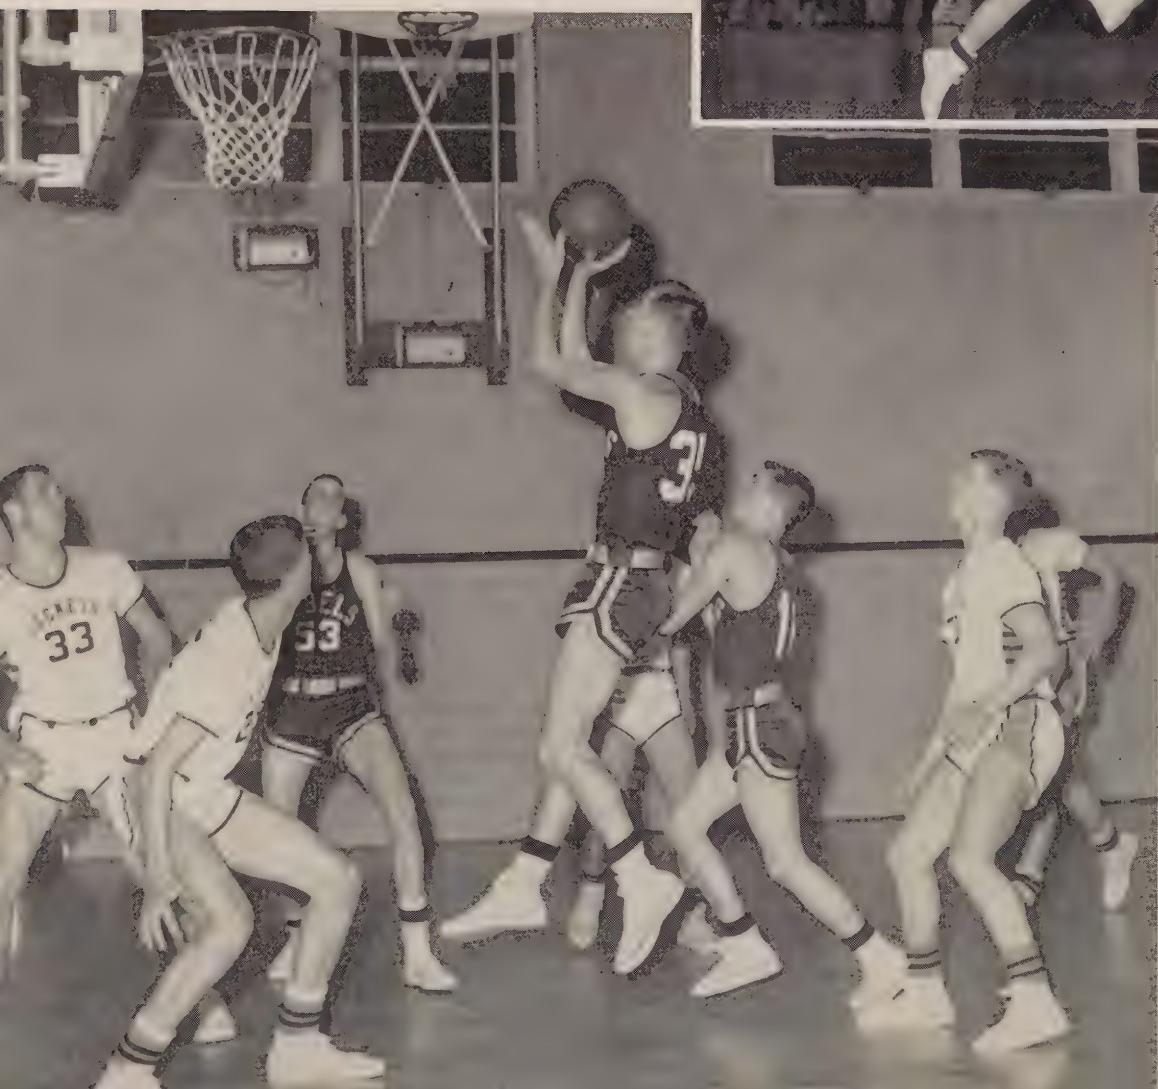

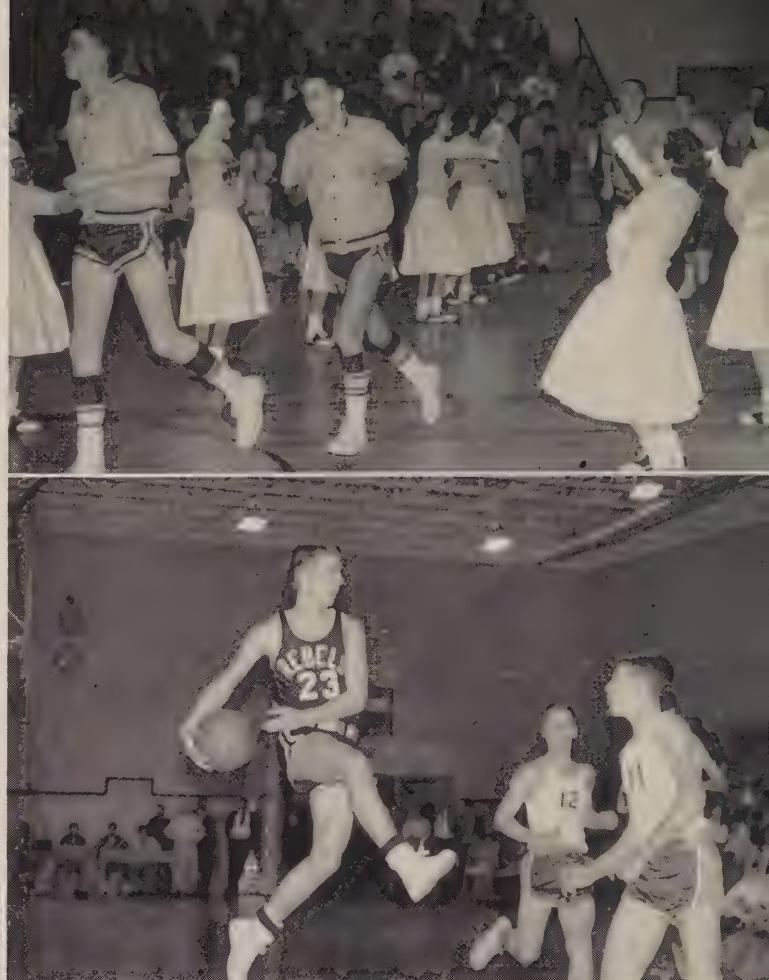

Below left: Everyone wants the ball, but the Rebels' Wood and Krost have the edge. Below: Rebel height pays off as 6'4" Bill Wood (53) snatches a rebound at Midlothian. Also shown are John Rawlings (13), Jimmy Blunt (33), and Lee Krost (45).

Junior cagers gain experience

The Rebel jay-vees, after a losing season last year, finished the 1957-58 season with an 8-7 record. From a turnout of 45 underclass boys, the squad was cut to include sophomores exclusively. The 8th and 9th grade candidates, coached by Ralph Crockett, posted a respectable 4-4 record.

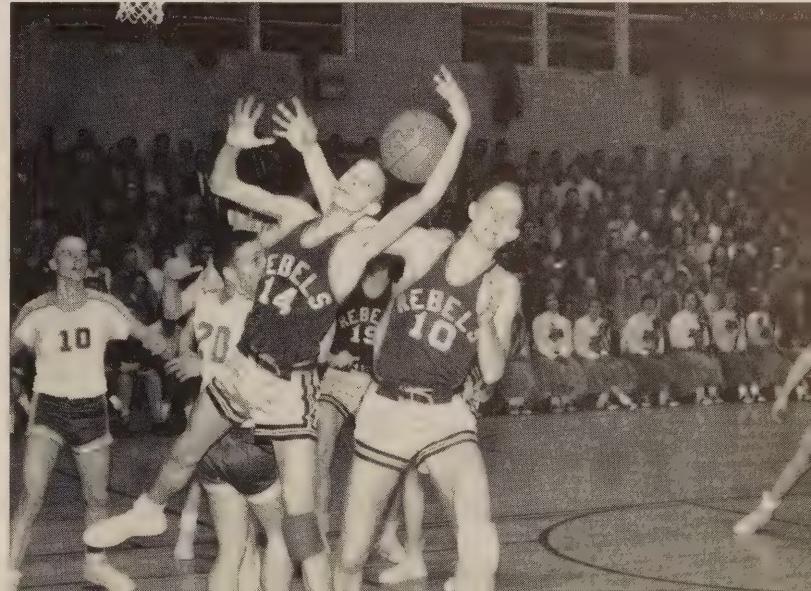

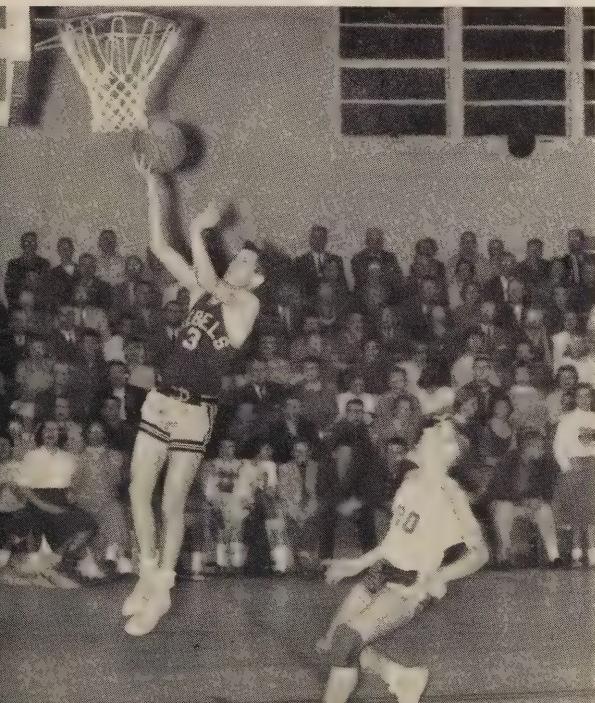

David Forsythe, the team's leading point-maker with 138 points, was followed in the scoring column by Coach Jon Massello, with a first team consisting of veteran jay-veers, found reserve strength in Pete Ragland, John Schuster, and George Matuck.

With nine places on the varsity squad being vacated this year by seniors, the Baby Rebels are looked to to provide the depth for next year's team.

Femme cagers have best season

Douglas Freeman's Rebelettes maintained a six-game win streak before bowing to Varina 36-22. The femme five crushed all Group I and private school opposition, completing the season with a 7-1 record. Included in their victories was an exciting 35-33 overtime decision over St. Gertrude's, a local power which had not lost an area game in over two years until meeting the Rebelettes.

The offense for the girl cagers can be summed up in two words—Marsha Sullivan. Pouring through 40 points against Highland Springs, she finished the season with a 29.4 average, topping all previous school records in both boys' and girls' basketball.

Co-captains for the year were Nancy Anderson and Nancy Christian, who proved invaluable on defense along with Judy Trimm and Loretta Awad. Assisting Marsha in the scoring duties were forwards Pat McMillen and Rhea Neuroth.

The girls' junior varsity won four and lost four. With only two returnees the squad found a promising scorer in Lynn Moran, who finished the season with 79 points, averaging 9.9 for the eight-game series.

Pertinent strategy is the word of the moment as Coach Nancy Anderson explains to her first string how to increase their lead in the tense Thomas Dale game.

Wrestlers take Metro title

WRESTLING. Seated: Joe Gibbs, Dave Montgomery. Kneeling: Teddy Mann, Stuart Clough, Bill Chapman, Butch Land, Paul Dickinson, Bobby Freeman, Jimmy Farley, Jimmy Cochrane, Tommy Grant, Terry Kinum. Standing: Neely Young, Ed Newman, Jack Lachman, Peter Trible, Benny Baronian, Eddie Evenson, Bob Duggan, Bill Hawfield.

For the second consecutive year the Rebel grapplers knocked down all area competitors to extend their win streak to 15 metropolitan matches. Coach Ray Long's matmen followed up their regular season triumphs by edging Saint Christopher for the Metropolitan Tournament title. Five of the six Rebels in the tension-filled final round won matches to shade the Saints 48-47.

The Rebels marched through the 1958 season 8-1, defeating four area teams twice and losing only to powerhouse Wakefield 45-10. The Blue and Gray had but two close matches, downing Hermitage 31-23 and Saint Christopher 25-17. Climaxing a successful season, the wrestlers traveled to Virginia Beach to collect five points in the state meet.

The Rebel golf team exhibited the most balanced team in the area in posting a 4-1-2 record. The only loss of the season came in an upset at Petersburg. In winning four matches the Rebels defeated Hopewell twice while downing Petersburg and Highland Springs once each. A powerful Christchurch team and Highland Springs managed to gain ties with the Blue and Gray.

During the season Ray Noonan, Gerald Grossman, Johnny OBrion, and Winston Smith played with equal ability, each holding the number one position at some time. Promising freshman Bill Noonan played well at times to give the team added depth.

'57 Cindermen smash school records

The Douglas Freeman track team, displaying an amazing show of power after winning only one meet in 1956, compiled an outstanding 6-1 record in dual competition during the 1957 season. Led by the top-notch sprint trio of Billy Tinder, Ray Taylor, and Tommy Anderson, the Rebel thinclads were strengthened by such outstanding younger boys as John Irby, Tommy Griggs, Bobby Freeman, and Ray Woody.

The lone loss came at the hands of Albemarle, led by Hans Franke, one of the finer Group II sprinters. The Rebels were performing without Tinder, their outstanding dashman. The thriller of the season was the

In the Henrico County meet, the Rebel thinclads barely nosed out Highland Springs for second place, with Hermitage once again romping to top position.

Although the trackmen notched a third in the district meet, the only Freemanite to score in the state meet was Tinder with one point for a fourth place in the 180-yard low hurdles.

Despite the loss of many valuable boys by graduation and transfer, the track team is looked to as a future power in the area.

Rebel nine breaks even in district

At a crucial moment Coach Massello points out mistakes to his waiting bench in a home game.

Tommy Griggs sets up a stone wall in front of home plate on a close play. The umpire is about to thumb the runner out.

Buddy Hopkins keeps close tabs on a Louisa runner. Hopkins was an outstanding glove man for the Rebel nine in 1957.

Anxiety is the expression of the day on the Rebel bench as shown by the look on Carlyle Franklin's face while he idly swings a bat.

A vastly improved Rebel nine, handicapped by the return of only three regulars and the lack of an experienced pitching staff, compiled a mediocre 7-9 record in the 1957 season.

After initial losses to Saint Christopher and Powhatan, Coach Jon Massello found a winning pitcher in Jerry Radford. Radford bore down to pitch blistering games against Washington-Henry and Henry Clay, giving up but one run in the victories.

Tris Hyde kept the Rebels rolling with a 7-4 victory over Midlothian. The diamond boys ran into a slump following this game, going down to four straight district defeats, two at the hands of an overpowering Varina nine.

Following a peak pitching effort by Hyde in a 2-0 shut-out of Louisa and a 15-4 clobbering of Midlothian, the team again fell victim to Saint Christopher's, 6-2.

An upset-minded Henry Clay nine humbled the Rebels 6-5 before the timber swingers bounced back to salvage the two remaining games on the schedule.

In posting a 7-7 District 2 record, the team battled hard behind the power hitting of Bo Johnson and All-Suburban second baseman Sonny Tinsley.

Cheerleaders inspire Rebel spirit

Cheerleaders whoop it up at the football game with St. Christopher.

Sporting new gray vests and blue skirts, the 1957-58 varsity cheerleaders maintained their reputation for coming up with something new and different each year. With the new outfits came exciting new cheers and songs, and each pep rally held a surprise, as the girls taxed their imagination and ingenuity to dream up the catchy ideas used in their skits.

Cheering at football games and sparking the basketball squad were not the only duties of the Rebel cheerleaders. As did the squads of previous years, the 1957-58 cheerleaders, headed by Agnes Smith, participated in charity fund-raising drives. For the third year in a row the girls made a top-notch showing in the Thalhimer Cheer Rally at the Jefferson Hotel, reaching the finals against Group I competition.

The Rebel cheerleaders received notice from two out-of-town newspapers during the state Group II basketball tournament at Blacksburg.

The second annual Homecoming parade and dance were under the supervision of the varsity squad and their sponsor, Mrs. Betty McAllister. Many hours of hard work, planning, and decorating were put in by the cheerleaders to make the event a success. Every Friday afternoon during the grid season found them decorating the goal posts with the colors of the Blue and Gray and of the opposing team.

The junior varsity squad supported the jay-vee teams with enthusiasm. In addition the girls represented the school in the Tobacco Bowl Parade because the varsity members were cheering at Albemarle.

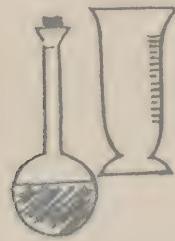

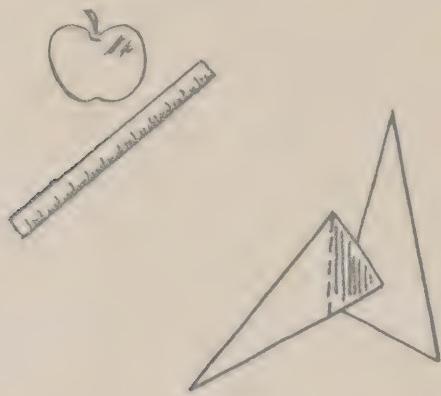

Senior cheerleaders leaving the squad because of graduation were Agnes Smith, Susie Williams, Sarah Wright, Ellen Jolly, Elaine Drake, and Becky Abernathy.

Junior Varsity cheerleaders seem overjoyed as they ride before the Homecoming crowd. Because many varsity cheerleaders were princesses, the jay vee girls and Jenny Hickey received the rare opportunity to cheer during a varsity game.

Miniature motor cars supplied a unique method of announcing the Homecoming football game. Ellen Jolly and Elaine Drake lead the motorcade.

Freely giving their time . . . their encouragement . . . their companionship . . .
sharing our problems and our fun . . .
to us a vital part of the spirit of DSF.

Mears encourages DSF development

Enthusiastic and experienced in his work, W. Howard Mears, as principal of Douglas Freeman, offers guidance, encouragement and understanding to the students.

A native of the Eastern Shore of Virginia, Mr. Mears was graduated from VPI and did post graduate work at both William and Mary and Columbia University.

In September of 1954, he entered Douglas Freeman as the first principal of a new school. His previous years as principal at Sandston, and later at Varina High School, had given him invaluable experience in dealing with students and faculty members, and he set about organizing this group of strangers into a unified and spirited student body.

Continually striving to develop the potentialities of the students, he has encouraged all types of competitive participation . . . in sports, language tournaments, forensics and publications.

With an interest in the school's reputation and standing in the community, he urges Freemanites to set their goals high and to obtain the very best from their high school education, that they may graduate well-rounded citizens.

I. HERBERT LEVISON

As assistant principal, I. Herbert Levenson added much to the life of Douglas Freeman High School by his able assistance in administrative affairs. His quick interest in the individual student and his ready wit and humor put students and teachers at ease immediately.

When it was necessary for Mr. Mears to be away, Mr. Levenson assumed the responsibilities connected with running a high school. A B.A. from Richmond Professional Institute and an M.A. from New York University gave him a broad academic background. Mr. Levenson will leave Douglas Freeman at the end of the year to become principal of the new Tuckahoe Junior High School.

Through the efforts of Miss Faye Hill, dean of students, and Miss Glasselle Adams a carefully planned guidance program has been built which benefits the entire school. Miss Hill works primarily with juniors and seniors, her office serving as a clearing house of information on scholarship and job opportunities. With her guidance, upperclassmen participate in vocational testing and College Board exams. Valuable advice on schedule planning, colleges and types of occupations are available to students through interviews or helpful pamphlets.

Miss Glasselle Adams is full time guidance counselor specifically for the ninth and tenth grades. She handles problems of individual students concerning educational, personal, or social adjustments.

In planning a pupil's program of studies, Miss Hill and Miss Adams consider individual potentialities, interests, and opportunities. They assist homeroom teachers with specific classification and schedule problems of pupils. In addition they handle the registration of transfer students throughout the year.

Miss Adams works closely with Miss Hill in administering group and individual tests. They serve as co-advisors to the eighth grade. The guidance counselors hold conferences with parents and teachers when needed.

Both counselors draw on their wide experience and training. Miss Adams came to Douglas Freeman in 1956 after a number of years as educational director of schools of nursing in Roanoke, Danville, and Richmond.

MISS FAYE HILL

She holds a B.S. degree in Nursing Education and a Master of Education in Guidance and Counseling from the University of Virginia.

Miss Hill has been with the Henrico County schools since 1945, serving as school psychologist and visiting teacher until the opening of Douglas Freeman in 1954. Previously she served on the faculties of Averett College, Danville, Virginia; Georgia Teachers' College, Statesboro, Georgia; and the high school at Madisonville, Kentucky.

Her educational training includes a B.S. from Western Kentucky State College and an M.S. from Louisiana State University. She has done post graduate work at Texas State College for Women, University of Texas, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, the College of William and Mary, and the University of Richmond. She has recently engaged in advanced graduate work in a doctoral program in psychology at Pennsylvania State University and University of Virginia.

DSF teachers proved in 1957-58 they were definitely up with the times. In the spring, Miss Carolyn Baker amazed and delighted students by wearing the new chemise style to school, while Miss Shirley Ward demonstrated an enthusiasm for sport cars as she attended races in Maryland on weekends.

Rebels were fascinated not only by the vitality and youthful attitudes of their instructors, but also by their interesting and varied activities outside school. Miss Marian Breeden taught typing at RPI one night each week. Miss Ellen Copenhaver gave weekly instruction to creative parents in various fields of art. Mr. John Brown, shop instructor, directs Camp Merriewood Harrison in the summer months.

Waiting for her ride, Mrs. Edna Meadows anticipates the welcome Christmas holiday.

Rebel teachers have wide interests

Teachers also engaged in leisure activities which at times included students. Mr. Harvey Lowder enjoyed occasional bridge games with several DSF boys. In the summer Rebel students met their teachers under water at Kanawha and other local pools.

Mr. Bill Clark discovered a talent for domesticity when he began to board at Mrs. Mildred Harris' home and was suddenly made official baby sitter and grocery buyer of the household.

DSF teachers made the headlines. Miss Marlise Bok returned to Douglas Freeman in the fall after visiting her family in Holland. Miss Ann Jones, became Mrs. L. B. Belsha, Jr. during the Easter holidays.

CLASSES

Students of five classes . . . each with loyalties and characteristics of its own . . . yet each a part of the whole . . . of Douglas Freeman.

Art classes provide an outlet for creative ability. W. S. Hudson uses a steady hand in cutting a stencil for a silk screen print.

Biology opens up a new world for curious minds. Miss Montelle Boisseau points out the characteristics of a hydra to Malinda Swineford.

School sponsors week of languages

"Buenos dias, senores y señoritas—" Amazed Free-manites cocked an ear to the morning announcements. Had Spaniards invaded the school? No, it was just an introduction to Language Emphasis Week sponsored by the department of foreign languages. During this week the students were exposed to skits, exhibits, and posters, all illustrating phases of the language and customs of other countries.

From foreign languages to English the Rebels continued to use their ingenuity and creative abilities to make the subject interesting. English literature came alive as Mrs. Eubank's senior students made interpretive sketches of the characters in Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. The model of Shakespeare's Globe theater constructed by Pat Geisst, Bobby Kindervater, and Ashby Tinsley made it easier for English classes to visualize

Macbeth on the Elizabethan stage. Interested students became acquainted with newspaper offices and writing for the Commentator. English students received state-wide recognition in the annual forensic contests as Bobby Freeman took second place in boys' prose reading and Barbara Brooke placed first in the Group II spelling contest at Charlottesville.

To help develop artistic talents, students were offered courses in art, shop, and mechanical drawing. Leather-craft and architectural drawing were added to the curriculum this year. In the shop and in the art room students turned out everything from boats and furniture to pottery and jewelry.

Pupils were often amazed to discover a five-room apartment on the second floor. Here home economics

Vivan los toros y corridas! Chavo Aguilar explains with authentic props the thrilling bullfights of his native Mexico to Spanish classmates.

Miss Dorothea Moore has discovered that by teaching mechanics of the typewriter, fewer bills come from the repairman.

Projects highlight world history classes. Architecture from abroad interests Jimmy Bendall, Dick Schultz, and Walter Flynn.

Mmm—smells delicious. Home economics student Cherry Galloway holds a tempting dish, fresh from the oven, for Charlotte Mills to examine.

Rebels practice homemaking, business students practiced cooking, sewing, and other homemaking projects. For the business classes local firms lent the school calculators, adding machines, electric typewriters, and dictaphones to help students keep abreast of the most efficient business practices. Taking shorthand from office workers, typing for teachers, and working in class for imaginary corporations, students gained additional knowledge in business procedures.

School work requires physical fitness. To develop not only strong bodies but also coordination, courage, and sportsmanship was the overall goal of the physical education department. Ropes, rings, golf, archery, modern dancing, all newly added this year, were not only fun for students but also extremely important in this broad program of development. Driver education, in which teachers carefully instructed students through both classroom work and actual driving, was available to those interested. Practical courses in hygiene and first aid were given in the classrooms in addition to the studies of narcotics, mental health, and rules for spectator sports.

For those students of scientific curiosity courses from general science to physics were available. The study of bugs and plants, the dissection of frogs and cats along with microscope study added extra spice as biology students endeavored to absorb the world of nature. Juniors dug into the difficult matters of chemistry. Douglas Freeman is well known across the state for its modern and amply equipped laboratory.

Rings make flying look easy. Judy Kenney demonstrates her ability on the new equipment in the gymnasium before her class.

"En Garde." French students Sammy Beach, Stuart Johnson, and Carolyn Hickey portray les bandits in a class skit to improve their French.

Searching for amoeba under a microscope absorbs Donna Patton and Duff Poage as they try to find the elusive creatures.

Brave seniors moved on to physics, which introduced the study of heat, light, and electricity. Individual demonstrations such as the mercury barometer, Leyden jar, and the principles of sound shown with musical instruments gave the students a clearer understanding of the laws of physics. To present their numerous accomplishments this year these science students organized a Science Open House for the public.

Smiling faces, and hands and pockets filled with hard candy and bubble gum was often the scene as students filed out of Colonel William Mack's math classes. To increase interest in their lessons, Colonel Mack held math-bees with a small prize for each correct answer, and consolation prizes for losers!

At Douglas Freeman the math course was complete with general math, two years of algebra, plane and solid geometry, trigonometry, and refresher math.

Seniors desiring more advanced math for college took solid and trig, while refresher math was a review, beginning with short cuts to adding and subtracting and working into an introduction to college mathematics.

Projects in geometry were well known to many students, including those who spent hours preparing them and others who enjoyed them displayed colorfully on bulletin boards.

A look into the future shows the vital needs for science and math in the world about us. In recognition of this development the school administration made 1958 an important year of planning, laying the ground work for a course of study to meet these growing needs. Establishing advanced courses in physics and chemistry for superior students in 1958-59 was a step toward this goal. Additional honor courses in English, history, and government, advancing students according to ability, will be offered next year.

These expressive thespians directed by Miss Marlise Bok dramatize a scene illustrating slaves under the hand of a cruel overseer.

Writing good headlines is a must for future journalists. Mrs. Kathleen Mears demonstrates the basic steps for her journalism class.

Eighth graders become a part of DSF

High school at last! To the eighth graders as they entered DSF for the first time everything was strange and a little frightening. But they soon became a part of the crowded halls and the hustle and bustle of changing classes.

The sophomores helped orient the newcomers with a student advisors' committee. With the help of teachers and friends the new Rebels became acquainted with the different phases and activities of their school.

With Homecoming came the first chance for the class of '61 to participate actively in the life of the school. Elected eighth grade princess, Brenda Young rode in the pregame parade, representing her class.

Six eighth graders were among DSF's representatives to the Junior Standards Council. At the meetings of the group they discussed ways to improve relations between teenagers and their parents.

Nine hard-working eighth grade newspaper carriers won expense-paid trips to New York and Florida by obtaining new subscriptions for the Times-Dispatch and the News Leader.

The newcomers, eager to join clubs, found that there were only three to which they could belong. For the scientific minds of the class, the Science Club was a new experience. The members contributed projects as their share of Douglas Freeman's first Science Fair. The Cub Club claimed five eighth graders with a bent toward journalism. The members of the Junior 4-H learned more about homemaking, agriculture, and community affairs.

Ten eighth graders with a little ingenuity formed a new club—The Gilded Peanuts United. All the members, devoted readers of "Peanuts," owned a Gilded Peanut. Garry Moore, Henry Morgan, and Bill Cullen from the TV program, "I've Got a Secret," became honorary members. The NHS, not to be confused with the National Honor Society, became a source of amusement for other eighth graders. The scurrying figures disappearing down the halls usually belonged to the National Hallwalkers' Society.

Athletic-minded eighth graders joined teams. Jack Frazee and Mickey Trinity played jay-vee football, while Kathie Layne helped the girls' jay-vee basketball team rack up points.

On a Saturday morning this year WRVA fans discovered Rebel Anna Lou Aaroe spinning records on her father's radio show. Because of the resulting fan mail, she became a permanent member of the program. Anna Lou selected the music for the show and chatted informally with her father between records.

"The End of Fear," a short story by Agnes Brown, helped complete Douglas Freeman's creative writing folder entered in the Virginia High School League Contest.

FRESHMAN OFFICERS. Temple Creedle, treasurer; Carol Creedle, vice-president; Bucky Pritchard, president; Mrs. Mildred Harris, sponsor; Betty Jean Creedle, secretary.

FRESHMAN COUNCIL. Jay Cox, Peter Trible, Eric Hart, Jack Windlow, Stanley Hughes, Tommy Ranson, Phyllis Baughan, Frances Loth, Diane Miller, Anne Barden.

Freshmen end fourth year at DSF!

As seasoned high school veterans with three years to their credit, the class of '61 began their freshman year at DSF. Their graduation in June 1961 will climax a record seven-year stay in high school.

The freshmen took an active part in the school activities. Beginning with Homecoming, they elected Peggy Taylor to represent them in the ceremonies. With an original and humorous pantomime, a ninth grade skit won second place in Stunt Night in December.

Three future scientists were among the first in Richmond to observe the Russian rocket as it circled the earth with Sputnik I. Citywide recognition was given to freshmen Tim O'Keefe, Louis Sikkelee, and David Hoff for this feat.

The freshmen class boasted of two of the five city wrestling champs from DSF—Teddy Mann and Stuart Clough. Stuart, placing fourth in the state meet, was the only Rebel to win a berth there.

With a series of bake sales the freshmen raised funds for a spring dance held on April 12. A theme of spring highlighted the affair, and the ninth graders rocked and rolled to the music of a juke box.

Not only Freemanites but forensic contestants from other schools were amazed to learn that the winner of the District II Girls' Prose Reading Contest was only a freshman. Her name—Anne Barden. As a participant in Junior Talent Night Anne also took first place with a monologue, "My Operation."

Sophomores help orient eighth graders

Helping the eighth graders adjust to their new high school life became the sophomores' project for 1957-58. Two sophomores were assigned to each eighth grade homeroom to act as Big Brothers and Big Sisters for the eighth graders. Their job was to answer questions and explain Douglas Freeman—its rules, its organizations, and its activities—to the newcomers. Strains of the Alma Mater could be heard during activity periods as the sophomores even became singing teachers for the eighth grade. Miss Ada Land and Miss Faye Hill acted as advisors for the orientation program.

At the annual Homecoming Festivities Pam Coddington represented the class as sophomore princess. She was selected honor attendant to the Queen.

On the national scene Kristy Knapp represented Richmond on the teenage staff of Good Housekeeping

Magazine. The January issue featured a novel thank you note by Kristy.

Singing with the Downbeats occupied the time of two sophomoreCarolyns—Carolyn Saunders and Carolyn Powell.

The sophomores started raising money for their Junior-Senior Prom a year ahead of time. Several bake sales gave them a head start on funds. A slightly wet but triumphant group of tenth graders furthered their fund drive with a spring car wash. On April 12 cars jammed the parking lot of Trinity Methodist Church where squads of four sophomores each rotated during the day, washing the cars.

All was not work for the energetic sophomores. A class picnic in the spring climaxed their second year in high school.

Could it be that it's a holiday for the entire school except for sophomores? It seems that way as a group of tenth graders arrives at school at the same time. Walking up the steps are Gurnee Thomas, Terry Hollett, Bill Marmon, Barry Fratkin, Jay Johnston, and Tommy Grant.

Brunswick stew sale finances prom

In preparation for the Junior-Senior Prom in the spring, the Class of '59 launched their first project of the year—a Brunswick Stew sale. This unique idea involved the support of the entire class, who canvassed the Richmond area for sales. A kitchen at Tuckahoe Elementary School was their base of operations, and everyone joined in to help make deliveries. This unusual class project was completely successful, but packing the stew and taking it all over the city left the juniors completely exhausted.

Eighteen outstanding members of the Class were recognized by the National Honor Society. For their journalistic ability five juniors were tapped by the Quill and Scroll.

On December 26 the juniors were saddened by the news of Linda Cook's death.

February became "the month" for the juniors when Class rings finally arrived.

Bobby Freeman, vice-president of the school SCA, received the honor of a nomination for State SCA President at the State Convention. He was also the recipient of one of the awards presented by Thalhimers to teenagers throughout the city who were outstanding in their schools.

For the first time, all the delegates to the SIPA convention in Lexington in April were from the Junior Class.

The Class of '59 turned the pages of an old scrapbook to find acts for their Talent Night. Soon after came the long anticipated Junior-Senior Prom. With months of secret planning and days of decorating behind, it proved a memorable finish to an eventful year.

In Memoriam

Linda Cook will always remain in the memories of her classmates at DSF. Her gay smile, her helpful gestures, and her courage will never be forgotten.

SENIOR OFFICERS. Linda Bowen, secretary; Wilton Curtis, president; D. E. Baggett, sponsor; Elaine Drake, vice-president; Craig Van Natta, treasurer.

SENIOR COUNCIL. Susan Murphey, Penn Walker, Jerry Radford, Barbara Brady, Ellen Jolly.

Senior executives guide the class

As the class of '58 reassembled in September to begin its last year in high school, the seniors found a long-awaited new member—Jorg Wasser, foreign exchange student from Munich, Germany. The seniors enjoyed helping Jorg become a part of the class and showing him the ropes in school activities.

In the excitement of an October football game, Sue Williams was crowned Homecoming Queen.

Months slipped by, and in the winter Marge Neff and Ray Noonan won national honors in the Merit Scholarship Tests. Another senior also received a prize—Peggy Dickinson won the DAR Award. An interest in community affairs became evident when Steve Matthews became a member of the Richmond Symphony Orchestra. With basketball season came Blacksburg and the State Tournament. There Jimmy Blunt became the first Rebel to win a berth on the All State Group II Team.

Spring came, and Billy Powers and Agnes Smith reigned as King and Queen at the Senior Court Dance. The senior celebrities were announced at that annual affair. Graduation suddenly loomed closer when in April seniors were measured for caps and gowns. May was a busy month with the Junior-Senior Prom and the Senior Play. Then on June 13 the class of '58 marched down the aisle and received their diplomas, marking an end to high school, but a beginning in life.

ADVERTISEMENTS

As the students . . . the sports . . . the clubs . . . the classes . . .

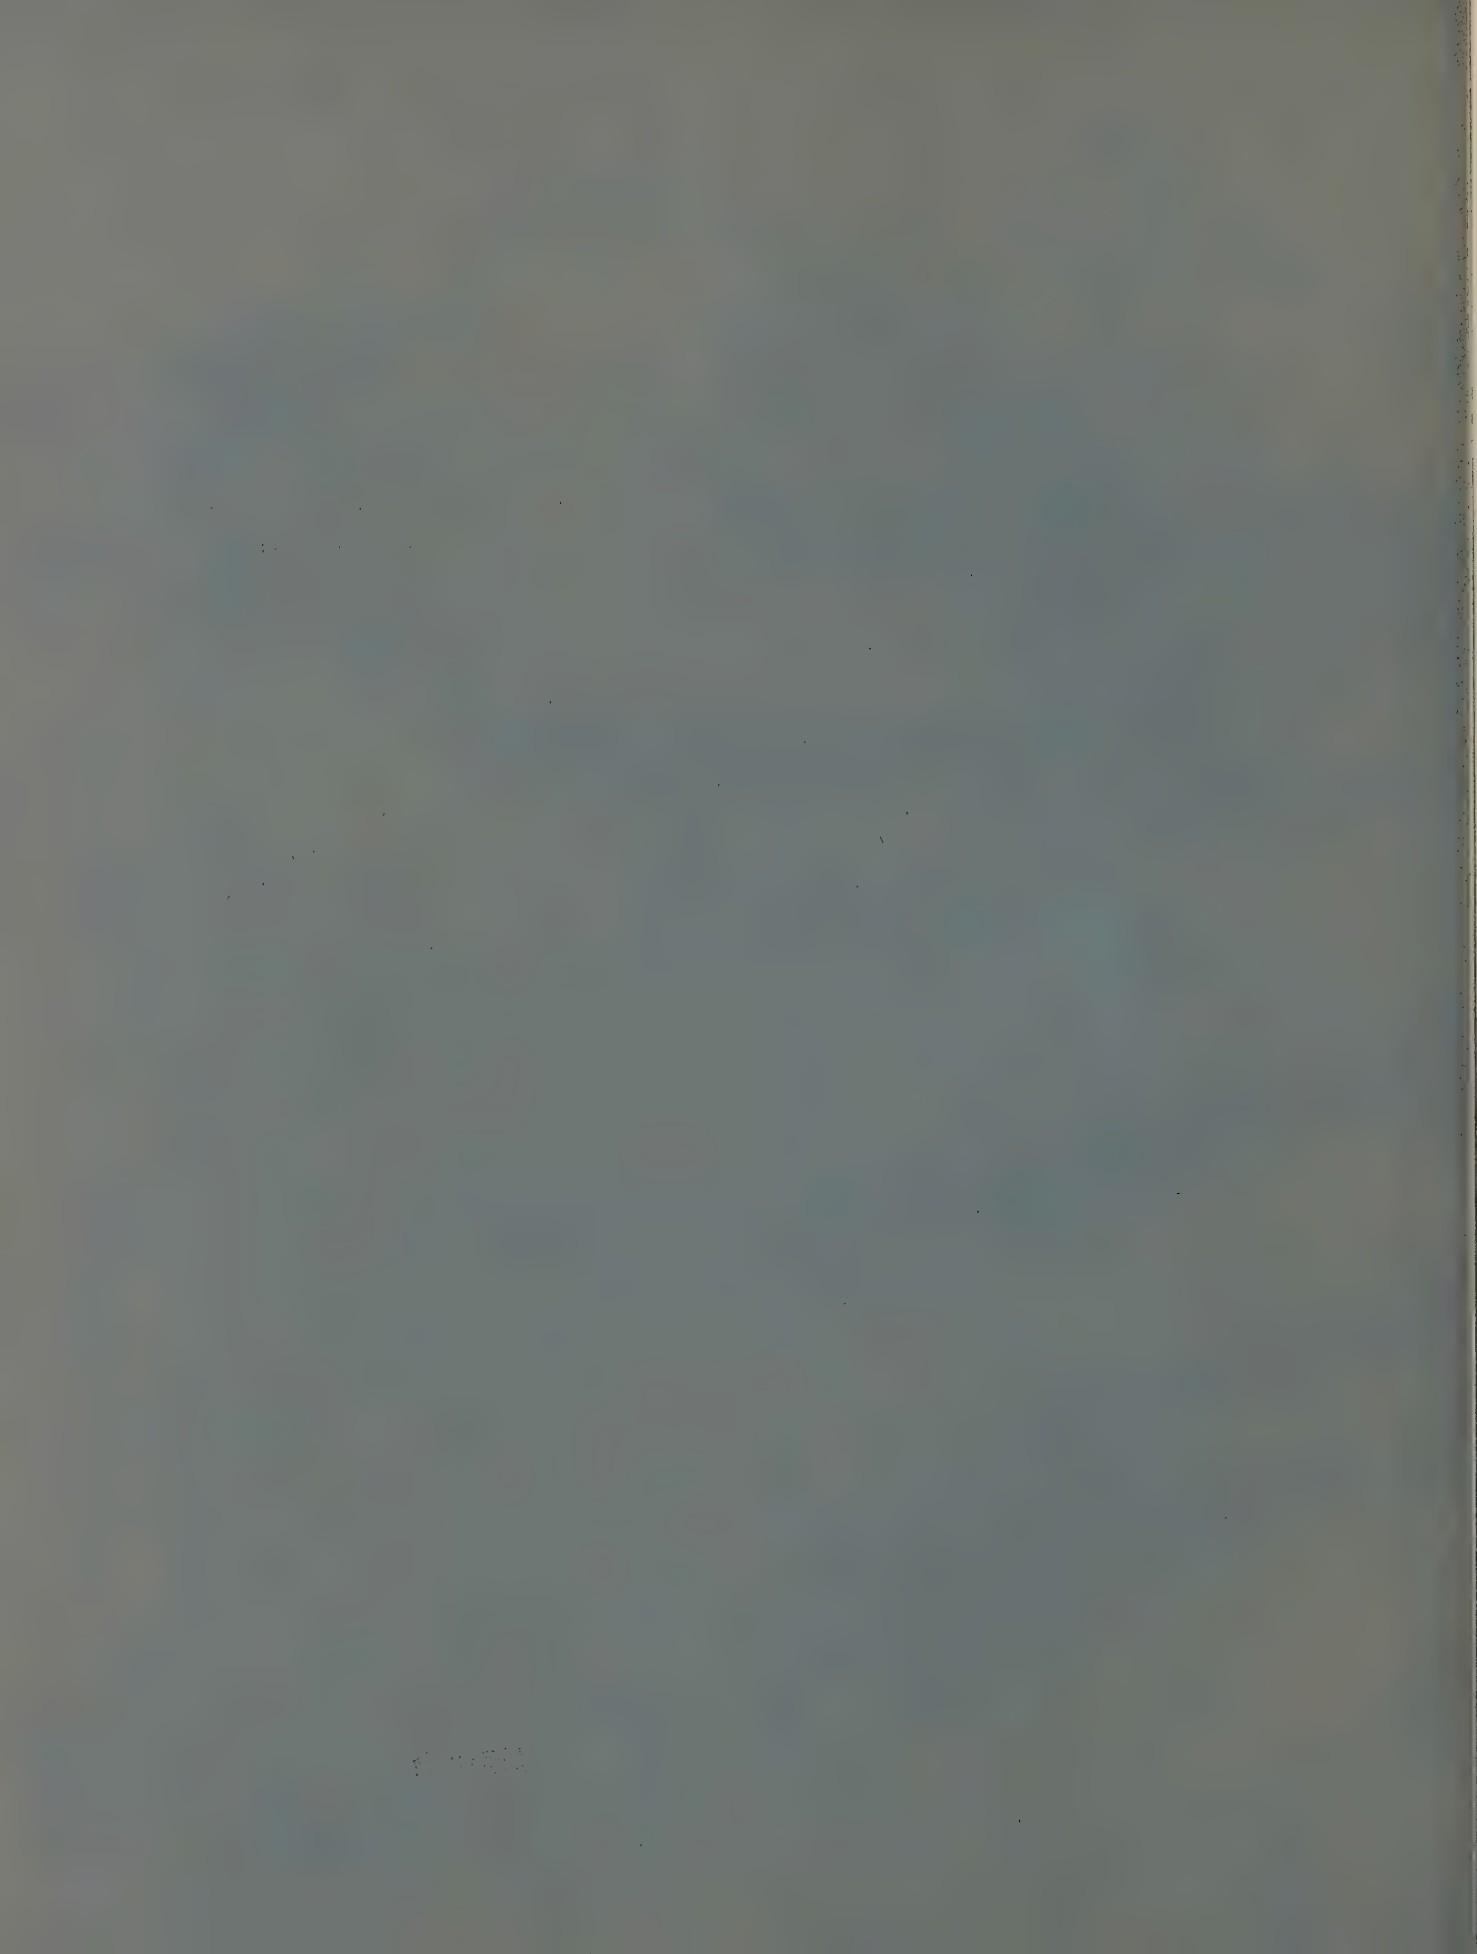

are parts of the whole of Douglas Freeman . . .

so the school is in turn a part of a larger whole.

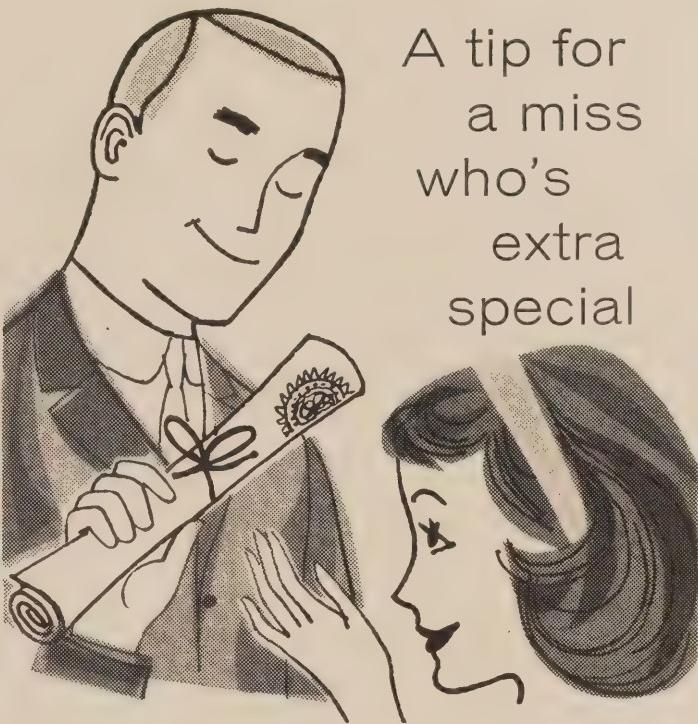

As the elements of DSF must blend to one body . . .

the school . . . businesses . . . churches . . . homes of the area merge to become our community.

extra special

If you are an alert young woman, you'll find an "extra special" job at the telephone company.

You'll meet lots of young people your own age... work in pleasant surroundings... receive good pay while you're being trained... get regular raises. And you don't need any experience!

Best of all, you'll be helping almost everyone in your community. Why not find out more about the advantages of telephone work?

The Mark of A Champion ...

WHEN a young man can face the world with the same undaunted courage that he bucks the line in football, and can take the bumps that inevitably will come to him in business, and can keep his fighting spirit and keep smiling . . . then he has the mark of a champion. The world needs young men like this and the world will make way for them. The life insurance business needs such men, so why not prepare yourself for a career in the life insurance business. It's a business of opportunity for young men of ambition and vision.
